HUNT CHARLTON ALL OVER WORLD AS WIFE SLAYER

ROME, June 15.—Through Foreign Minister Antonino, the Italian government has sent to the police of every European country and the United States a full description of Porter Charlton, husband of Mary Scott Castle Charlton, the victim of the Lake Como trunk murder.

"ARREST CHARLTON ON SIGHT," IS THE ORDER.

"Arrest him on sight on a charge of wife murder," is the request of the Italian police. The official description reads:

"Age, apparently twenty-five; build, slim; eyes, blue; complexion, fair; face, oval; height, medium; manner, modish; anaemic; addicted to cigarettes; speaks all languages but English badly."

Ships at all Italian ports, as well as Trieste and those of France, are being closely watched.

Charlton's description has also been sent by wireless to the captains of Italian liners which have left for America in the last few days, including the Virginia and the Verona. The latter left Genoa for June 8 and the former cleared from the same port the day Mrs. Charlton's body was found.

Arrest at Geneva.

The police according on the murder mystery were to-day advised by the authorities of Italian and French cities and by London's Scotland Yard that men suspected of being Porter Charlton, husband of Mary Scott Castle Charlton, the beautiful victim, were under arrest or being closely watched.

The most promising of these was a report from Geneva, Switzerland, that the police of Lausanne had in custody a man closely answering the description of the husband. According to the Geneva authorities, this man arrived in Switzerland shortly after the time that Charlton is declared to have taken a St. Gothard train from Como on Thursday night, several hours after the discovery of the trunk containing Mrs. Charlton's body. Count Guglielmi, the taciturn procurator, who informed of the Geneva report, smiled for the first time in two days, and said: "This would account for many things." He refused to elucidate his somewhat cryptic remark.

ROOSEVELT HERO AMONG IMMIGRANTS

ON BOARD THE S. S. KAISERIN AUGUSTE VICTORIA, June 15 (via the S. S. Mauretania and Cape Race, N. F., by wireless.—Theodore Roosevelt, speeding homeward, has aroused great enthusiasm among the second cabin and steerage passengers. The hundreds of immigrants going to America regard him almost as a demi-god. The former President's popularity among the second-class passengers was shown Monday at the reception held on the sun deck, which was decorated with bunting, which attracted little attention among the first-class passengers.

The second-class people were admitted first. The captain took Mr. Roosevelt on a tour of the decks and the ex-President shook hands right and left. He was received with more enthusiasm than at the reception, which was over quickly, apparently to his surprise.

The deck was illuminated last night for the Italian dance and the scene was unusually pretty. Mr. Roosevelt remained in his cabin until the dance was over.

Colonel Roosevelt went down in the cabin hold to-day, where he shook hands with each of the grimy shovelers and then picked up a shovel himself and worked before one of the white-hot furnace openings for several minutes.

I really can't say more except that Cavalieri and I are as friendly as ever; pals, yes, good pals."

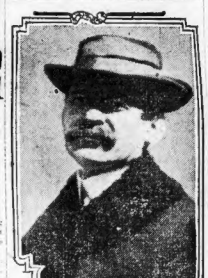
LAWYER COAKLEY, WHO SUMMED UP IN KELIHER CASE



DANIEL COAKLEY

GRAUSTEIN TO TEST LEGALITY OF MILK LAW

With the enforcement to-day of the new regulation of the Board of Health concerning the sale of milk in sealed receptacles came the information that W. A. Graustein of the Boston Dairy Company proposed to test the legality of the new rule in the courts.

A circular letter was sent to all of his customers by Graustein advising them that the board had no legal right to enforce such a regulation and giving as his opinion the belief that milk can still be sold from dip tanks, provided such receptacles are clean, sanitary and properly iced.

"The Board of Health has no power to say how anybody shall dispose of their commodity. If milk that is sold is clean and conforms to the proper standard, it seems to me that the jurisdiction of the board ends in the matter," said Mr. Graustein to an AMERICAN reporter.

"As I interpret the regulation," he continued, "it means that milk must be sold in either sealed jars, bottles or other closed or capped receptacles, or receptacles which have been approved by the Board of Health. I consider that where a dip-tank is being used that has been approved by the Board of Health dealers still have the privilege of selling their milk from it just as long as it is clean, sanitary and properly iced."

Notwithstanding this opinion of one of the largest milk contractors in the city, the board of health is preparing to rigidly enforce the regulation which, according to its interpretation, prevents the sale of milk from anything except sealed bottles or similar receptacles.

"We have no desire to be unreasonable with the dealers," said Dr. Samuel H. Durgin, chairman of the health commissioners, "but we are going to enforce this regulation."

WOULDN'T WORK FOR 'SYSTEM,' IS DIVORCED

When Mrs. Frances L. White of Roxbury demanded of her husband, John, a reason for his refusal to work and support her and her child, he answered, "I am a staunch believer in Socialism and I will not allow capital to realize an unjust profit on my labors." Mrs. White brought the action against him for divorce before Judge Richardson, in the divorce court to-day and told her story. She testified that she had secured this position after he had refused to work. He said it was too much for the work. He secured a position at $100 a month, and after a celebration in Alabama, but gave it up. She was granted a decree nisi.

COLEMAN HAD AID IN LOOTING, SAYS COAKLEY

TROOPS HEM IN OUTLAWS

MONROE BRIDGE, June 15.—Every lady, every cowboy of wild and desolate Monroe Mountain, one of the foothills of the Green Mountains, is to-day being searched for the fifty militiamen and mountaineer sharpshooters, who believe that they have surrounded Silas Phelps, the desperate fugitive murderer of Deputy Sheriff Emmett F. Haskins.

"Take Phelps, capture the man, shoot him if necessary," are the commands under which the bandit hunters are working. "Capture him, alive, is possible; if not, shoot."

From the fact that every escape from Monroe Mountain is believed to be protected, State Officers Thomas E. Bligh of Pittsfield and James McKay of Northampton, who are conducting the man hunt, believe that they have Phelps bottled up.

On Guard All Night.

The militiamen stood guard all last night, ready to pursue should Phelps make a dash for liberty. To-day a search for a cave where Phelps is said to have concocted an illicit still will be begun. Phelps has boasted that he could elude the police for time and told of this cave.

Among the force hunting Phelps on Monroe mountain is Sheriff George Phelps, a relative of the outlaw. Sheriff Phelps says:

"Phelps is a coward. Dime novels and Monroe whiskey have made him what he is. When he is sober my ten-year-old son could make him crawl on the ground. He is afraid of me as he would be of the devil. He probably will stay away from my house, but if he does not, gun or no gun, I will drag him to the officers with a rope about his neck."

Mrs. Phelps Not Awed.

The presence of the State troops here has awed many farmers living in the vicinity, but Mrs. Phelps, who has been closely watched since it was reported that she was seen carrying dishes into the woods near her home, showed no fear when they appeared to search her house. As they departed she coolly shouted to them, "Keep off the grass."

A systematic search of the mountain within a radius of half a mile to the west and north of the house out where the murder was committed has been made by the troops and State police. The soldiers another every bit of ground that could conceal the bandit. There still remain, however, many miles of forest to be explored before the searchers can say they have scoured the countryside.

President Taft and party were taken to the home of W. W. Mills, escorted by three companies of the National Guard. For the entire distance he drove through lines of school children, who showered him with blossoms.

Keliher Lawyer, in Bitter Speech, Arraigns Wrecker of Cambridge National City Bank as Champion Liar.

Somebody in control in the National City Bank of Cambridge was a party to the wrecking of that institution, besides George W. Coleman, and Coleman is protecting them, was the startling charge made by Daniel H. Coakley to-day in his argument to the jury in the Federal Court for the freedom of "Big Bill" Keliher, charged with aiding Coleman in the bank looting.

"YOU KNOW COLEMAN IS PROTECTING SOMEBODY."

"The receiver says that $360,000 is gone from the wrecked bank," declared Coakley. "Coleman says that is took $240,000. Where is the rest? You know Coleman is protecting somebody. This somebody else, if ever discovered will be found to be somebody in authority at the bank. Where was President Dresser? Where was Barker? Where were the other directors? It is significant that neither Dresser nor Barker are the other directors have been seen about the courtroom here during this very important trial."

Mr. Coakley finished his address at 12:30 o'clock and Mr. French began at once. He asked the jury to help him take the first step toward getting rid of the gang of sharpers and swindlers with which Keliher was connected.

"It is a gang," declared Mr. French, "that not only menaced the financial institutions of the country, but the morality of the youth. They are blacklegs and crooks, and they who are at large have their ears to the ground waiting to hear your verdict, whether they shall take up the work again or disappear for ever."

"Wanted Someone Else."

Coakley in the course of his speech charged that Coleman did not expect to serve the fifteen years of his sentence, but that by getting some one else convicted he would have his sentence cut down to two, or three or four years. The lawyer declared that Mr. French wanted to get somebody else than Coleman because the authorities at Washington were clamoring for somebody besides this $12 a week clerk.

Keliher's lawyer denounced Mamie Hightower as "a poor, little miserable thing," a liar, and a perjurer. He charged that the government sleuths manufactured and suppressed evidence.

"Lockhart has got the crookedest face I ever saw," said the lawyer, "and I've seen many crooked ones. He perjured himself flatly to you."

"Coleman Champion Liar."

Coakley called Coleman "a champion liar," and declared that "every man on this panel must have known that two days before Coleman swore repeatedly and repeatedly to what he knew was a lie." Then Coakley declared:

"You've got to believe Coleman—he's a liar all that he has told you, or acquit the defendant. But after what we've seen in this court room it is no insult to ask the question, 'Will you believe George W. Coleman?'

"Don't you know he was lying here? Lying, deceiving, concealing. Just as he lied, concealed and deceived at the bank. Champion liar that he is, he did it without the wink of an eyelash.

"I would not hang a blind pup on his testimony!"

"Coleman has perjured himself," declared Coakley, "in front of all you twelve men. And Coleman is the government's case."

Mr. Coakley's Address.

Mr. Coakley said:

"Mr. Foreman and gentlemen of the jury: It's a pretty hot day, and I will try not to inflict myself upon you any longer than is necessary. It seems to be my duty, however, to call your attention to certain evidence that was brought out during this trial.

"You cannot under your oaths convict Keliher unless you believe the stories of George W. Coleman. You've got to believe Coleman, believe all he has told you or acquit the defendant. Well, after what we've seen in this court room, it's an insult to ask the question. Will you believe George W. Coleman's. You must be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt of the guilt of this defendant.

"Assume that George W. Coleman was the young man involved either in seeking the hand of your daughter or upon sig- nature of your daughter or upon your entering upon you the investments of your life savings. Would you listen to Coleman? Would you take action on such serious propositions simply on the say of George W. Coleman? And if you wouldn't in your own affairs you should not under the oaths that you have taken to mete out true justice to this defendant at the bar.

All Hangs on Coleman's Story.

"You must believe George W. Coleman, for Coleman alone says that Keliher knew that the money spent at faro or spent by Coleman was taken from the National City Bank. No human soul says that but George W. Coleman.

"These twelve men will not say that Keliher is guilty and cannot say that Keliher is guilty unless there is the conviction in the minds of the twelve that Keliher knew that Coleman was taking money from the bank. You must believe Coleman to convict Keliher.

"Now, let's see some of these stories.

HARVARD OUT IN NEW SHELL

HARVARD TRAINING QUARTERS, Red Top, June 15.—With another blast raging day the Harvard crews went out for their morning work, all crews being instructed by Coach Wray in his single shell. The varsity in Coleman's gig and the freshmen eight also went down to the mouth of the river repeatedly and repeatedly to what he knew was a lie." Then Coakley declared:

"You've got to believe Coleman—he's a liar all that he has told you, or acquit the defendant. But after what we've seen in this court room it is no insult to ask the question, 'Will you believe George W. Coleman?'

"Don't you know he was lying here? Lying, deceiving, concealing. Just as he lied, concealed and deceived at the bank. Champion liar that he is, he did it without the wink of an eyelash.

Bradley of the Hood Rubber Company of Watertown, Jonajiet Kazarian of Watertown said on the witness stand that he was drunk at the time and never intended to kill the superintendent. Two days before that Kazarian had quit his job because the superintendent would not attend to a fancied grievance of Kazarian.

ARREST 9 ON THEFT CHARGES

Nine business men were to-day arrested by Inspectors Sweeney and McGinley on secret indictments which charge them with conspiracy to steal and receiving stolen goods to the amount of $4,857.50 between January 1, 1909, and April 27, 1910, the property of the Woodward Manufacturing Company, No. 154 Federal street, this city. The property alleged to be stolen consists of wrenches and composition metal.

The goods were stolen by employes of the Woodward Company, so members of the firm said to-day. They were missing their property for a long time and finally set a watch with the result that they detected enough to call in the police. The police charge that the men arrested knew that the goods they bought were stolen, and that they re-sold them with this knowledge.

The arrests made so far include Bernard Davidson of No. 12 North avenue, Roxbury, junk dealer; Nathan Gilman, No. 21 Normandy street, Roxbury, bookkeeper; Samuel Simon of No. 89 Salem street, hardware dealer; Harry Simon, his son, same address, hardware salesman; Jacob Shanberg of Clinton, junk dealer; Jacob Berkowitz, No. 10 Fowler street, junk dealer, hardware dealer; Samuel Berman, No. 89 Salem street, hardware dealer, and Samuel H. Gorgon, No. 2-4 Elm street, Chelsea, hardware dealer.

The men were arraigned in the Superior Criminal Court before Judge Wait and all pleaded not guilty to the two counts on which each was arrested. Six of the men gave bail in $5,000 for their further appearance, $2,000 being required on one count and $1,000 on the second.

The men who gave bail were Samuel Simon, Harry Simon, Samuel Berman, Jacob Berkowitz, Nathan Gilman and Bernard Davidson. Among the charges against the men is the theft of 10,000 Stillman wrenches valued at 3½ each.

Later in the day Oscar Shultz, twenty-four, junk dealer of No. 98 Hemingway street, was placed under arrest on an indictment similar to that upon which the other eight men pleaded not guilty. He will be arraigned before Judge Wait in the Criminal Superior Court.

WAR SECRETARY POINTS IDEALS TO THE CADETS

WEST POINT, June 15.—Secretary of War Dickinson addressed the graduating class to-day. He warned the cadets against the one-man rule, and emphasized the necessity of people in authority being "imbued with a reverence for constitutional limitations."

"No man is so great or so good," said the Secretary, "that he can be permitted to govern outside the law and the constitution. No public good, however attractive, is worth gaining at the price of setting aside a fundamental principle of government. This is substituting a government of law, and this is the beginning of the end of the republic."

In beginning his address the Secretary lauded our great military heroes, and told how some of them had been elected to the presidency as a result of valorous deeds in battle.

"The War of the Revolution elevated to the presidency Washington," he added, "that of 1812, Jackson, that with Mexico, Taylor, that between the States, Grant, and that with Spain, Roosevelt. Although the accession to the presidency did not follow immediately upon their military services, there can be no doubt that reputations gained in arms by the two Harrisons and Hayes were potent factors in raising them to that high office.

"Hero worship, founded on the noblest feelings in our nature, always has, and unless the history of the world since it began shall be reversed and the profession of arms shall lose its prestige, always will, especially in great crises, make our soldiers potential in our national life, not merely for defence, but in the administration of government.

"To be truly great, soldiers must be not only great in deeds, but great in all high qualities. Courage they should have, of course. Physical bravery, though mediaeval, is the quality which soldiers generally possess. There never was a time when more than enough did not volunteer for any hazardous enterprise. When Hobson went in to sink the Merrimac, many times the number needed freely offered up their lives.

"Freedom from self-aggrandisement is another tribute of great souls. While there patriotism did not permit them to decline great office, yet neither Washington, Lee nor Grant sought preferment. They would lay down rather than voluntarily take up new honors, and nothing more becomes them than their unaffected humility. General Lee tendered his resignation to Mr. Davis, saying that he should be succeeded by a younger and abler man."

RAILROAD BILL BIG VICTORY FOR RADICALS

WASHINGTON, June 15.—There has been general satisfaction in Washington over the successful termination of the long fight over the administration's railroad bill.

After four months of debate and compromise the conference report was finally agreed upon and is now before both the Senate and House. It is expected that it will go though both bodies without difficulty, and that President Taft will make it law by affixing his signature to it by the end of this week.

In its final form the act contains practically all of the radical provisions. The House, which came within six votes of adopting the Senate bill, seems to have secured from the committee of conference many more concessions than that body usually receives in its conference at the hands of the Senate. Regular and insurgent Republicans and a fair number of Democrats of the Senate expressed satisfaction. No difficulty in the House is anticipated, although Representative Dright of New York, the Republican whip, sent out notices for all Republicans to be on hand to-day.

Every one seems to be pleased, including President Taft, who was quoted by administration conferees with him about the bill as expressing the opinion that it contained practically all of the essentials for which he had originally contended. Satisfaction was also expressed by Massachusetts men at the Capitol.

ROBBED, HE SAYS, THEN GIVEN SODA

Car Number, twenty-two of No. 27 Milford street, Boston, according to Joseph Sousa of No. 31 Sixth street, Cambridge, is one of the most thoughtful and gentlemanly robbers alive. After Judge Almy, hearing Sousa's story in the Charlestown District Court to-day, he held Nispel for the grand jury in $500 bail. Nispel pleaded not guilty. Sousa declared that Nispel took $23.25 and a gold watch and chain from him and then came to his business address and got $10 more. Sousa says that when Nispel got the ten spot he treated Sousa to soda water and gave him car fare.

MIDDLEBORO TO GIVE AUTOISTS A SQUARE DEAL

By J. C. KERRIBON.

Middleboro evidently proposes to be fair to all motorists traveling through its precincts, and will again this year do what it can toward making pleasant the life of autoists passing through that town.

The Middleboro Automobile Club has, with the permission of the Selectmen and Chief of Police Swift, arranged for the passing out of cards to visiting motorists, requesting them not to exceed the speed limit through the town.

Men will be stationed at the thickly settled parts of the town, and as the driver reaches that point he will be handed a card calling his attention to the speed regulations and requesting his assistance in enforcing the same.

This will give every one an opportunity to do the right thing. If, after receiving one of these cards, he desires to speed through the town he will do so at his own risk, and its safe to say that the police will take means to make him regret such work.

Middleboro, it will be remembered, was first of the towns in this State to pass out warning notices and to hang out a welcoming banner for the welfare of motorists.

Manager Charles E. Fay of the local branch of the Ford Company has received notification that a Model T Ford, entered and driven by its owner, E. N. Willingham of Athens, won a perfect score in the Atlanta-New York endurance run, in which seventy cars competed.

* * *

There were only six cars that finished with clean scores, and all but the Ford had one or more from $5,000 to $9,000. Mr. Fay considers this, as well he might, a most excellent showing.

* * *

It is understood that the police of Springfield are decidedly active in the enforcement of the speed law. Most of the prosecutions are being made by members of the bicycle squad, who follow automobilists on a measured course and obtain the data by means of a speedometer on their own machines.

The E. M. F. Thirty stability and utility car had a narrow escape from trouble last night. While driving on Commonwealth street in the late hours of the night, the car wheels skidded on a slippery car track. The car swung to the right, much to the alarm of the driver and the easy control of the car, the test might have come to a sudden conclusion.

The car was turned in a circle once, but was brought up and started along in the even tenor of its way, there being no trouble thereafter.

The showing made by the car up to date, most gratifying to the local company, the car having covered something like 1,800 miles without the slightest difficulty, and being in the very best of condition.

The car seems to gain power and ability with each additional mile it travels, and as Mr. Crockett very aptly said, "It looks as though it might go on forever."

Although magnificent wedding presents were reported before the wedding to be on the way everyone in Australia they were not on view at the reception.

VOTE SUMMER SESSIONS FOR LYMAN INQUIRY

Without a vote in opposition, the House of Representatives to-day adopted an order authorizing the committee investigating the alleged suicide of John Newman and the methods of punishment at the Lyman School at Westboro to sit during the Summer after the adjournment of the Legislature and to report its findings to the Governor and Council and also to the next Legislature. The order was offered by Representative Harry H. Ham of Dorchester, Chairman of the investigating committee.

Two amendments to the order were adopted, one offered by Representative Parks of Fall River, that the committee shall investigate the probationary system at the Lyman School, and the other by Representative Dolan of New Bedford, that the committee shall receive such compensation as is approved by the Governor and Council.

An amendment offered by Representative Merrill of Haverhill that the committee shall investigate the food served at the Lyman institution was defeated after Representative Carmody of Worcester, a member of the investigating committee, said that this could be investigated by the committee without the amendment.

Another order by Representative David R. Shaw of Charlestown for the appointment of a joint committee, to be two members of the House, to investigate the whole subject of correctional systems at all State institutions, was rejected by a rising vote of 19 to 67 and a roll call was refused.

In speaking of his order, Chairman Ham said that it would enable the investigating committee to make a fair investigation, according to the Legislature which appointed it, the committee itself and the public.

EGG ON LAST CALL SAVES HEN'S LIFE

NEW YORK, June 15.—Bertha, a Plymouth Rock hen belonging to Captain P. J. Fraser of the Bermudian, Quebec steamship line, established a new reputation in the eleventh hour and has a place of honor aboard the vessel.

Captain Fraser bought her on the assurance that she would produce a fresh egg for his breakfast every day. Bertha failed to make good. She even escaped and did not appear for several days. When the Bermudian reached port Bertha was aboard. She had not offered a single egg during the trip. Just before the pier was reached Bertha and 24 in the steerage.

David Flanagan, a foreman stevedore, went to the rescue with a pail attached to a long rope. He dropped Bertha into the pail and yelled to the men above to haul away. Speaking for myself," quoth Captain Fraser as he looked on, "I don't care whether the rope breaks or not. That hen the next minute he was sorry. Bertha rose with signals of joy, and lo and behold! In the bottom of the pail was an egg.

H. W. SAVAGE BACK WITH NEW PLAYS

NEW YORK, June 15.—Henry W. Savage arrived on the Kronprinzessin Cecile from his Spring trip to Europe, bringing with him a sheaf of manuscripts. "The death of the King naturally brought the articals to a standstill in London," said Mr. Savage, "but there was brought forward there one very favorable play—'The Little Damozel'—which I have secured for production in New York. Miss May Buckley and Miss Rose Stahl have the leading parts. In Paris I had time to assure myself that 'Theodore & Co.' is the cleverest farce that city has had in many years. Oliver Herford is making the adaptation and I expect to make an early production in New York. In The Great Name,' a Vienna hit by Victor Leon and Leo Feld, I have a comedy of entertainment that promises exceptional things. 'Little Boy Blue' an operetta by Ivan Caryll, and Rose A. Stahl, is the feature of the new season at the Johnny Stevens Theatre in London, impresses me as the most delightful composition in its field I have ever heard."

HUSBAND OF BEAUTIFUL TRUNK VICTIM SOUGHT BY SCOTLAND YARD MEN

By VANCE THOMPSON.

Special Cable to Boston American.

COMO, Italy, June 15.—The activity of the American State Department in trying to solve the Charlton mystery is bearing fruit.

Ambassador Leishman, whose services have been enlisted to trace the murderer of Mrs. Mary Scott Castle Carlton, was informed to-day that the Home police had sent to Scotland Yard, London, a full description of Porter Charlton and had requested that if Charlton were found in England to communicate instantly with Rome.

The ambassador received a hint that in reply to this request of the Italian officials so close a watch had been kept on arrivals in England from the continent that a secret agent had reported the presence of Charlton at Folkston, which is on the direct line of the continental travel.

Two agents were immediately sent from Scotland Yard to investigate this report, but no word has thus far been received here of the result.

Hope for Confession.

The Russian Ispolatoff underwent another lengthy examination but the magistrate was unable to extract anything new from him. The authorities are becoming convinced that the only solution to the mystery rests with Ispolatoff making a confession. He insists that he knows nothing more of the murder than what he read in a Milan newspaper before he was arrested.

It must be confessed that all the evidence thus far gathered is favorable to him.

The postoffice clerk at Moltrasio states that on Monday morning Porter Charlton looked with great interest at the advertisement of ships leaving for New York, and feels sure that he had made up his mind to take one.

On the other hand a merchant from Lugano, named Poletti, declares that Charlton entered the train compartment he occupied on Monday and travelled to Berne. When questioned by an officious Charlton said he was going to London.

Wild Rumors Circulated.

The man who let the room to Ispolatoff at Romano says that the Russian was away all Monday night, returning Tuesday with a Danish friend named Delaporte, and, it is assumed, wished to give the impression that he had been in his friend's company during that time.

I learn that the wildest rumors are rife concerning the Charltons in Milan. All people discussed one to the effect that Estelle Reid, whose body was found in the Bay of Naples, was to marry Charlton. It says that letters were found in Miss Reid's effects addressed to her as Mary Portman.

It is further asserted that an unknown man who is said to have followed Miss Reid answers the description of Ispolatoff. It is uncertain whether the Charltons were in Naples at the time of Miss Reid's death.

Pietro Fonegona, a carpenter, who helped drag the sunken trunk from the river the day that just after 9 o'clock on the same night he was fishing with a rod near the jetty when Charlton came along and after consulting an Italian-Italian dictionary asked him how deep the water was there.

Other witnesses alleged that Charlton reached the Como station about midnight and on Thursday boarded a St. Gothard express, producing a ticket for Basle, which is out of the way of American steamers.

MRS. CHARLTON, PRETTY VICTIM OF STRANGE CRIME

MRS PORTER CHARLTON

LAKE COMO DEATH ARREST IN GENEVA

pect, was the object of a clever manoeuvre by the police when word of the arrest arrived. Awakened in his cell, he was shown the dispatch, though not allowed to examine it, and brought face to face suddenly with grim mementoes of the crime, told that the new prisoner had confessed, implicating him. The man of iron nerve collapsed, shrugged his shoulders and asked for a cigarette.

The utmost effort of the clever Italian police has failed to shake him so far. One of the most desperate tricks of the police has been tried without avail on Ispolatoff. In his cell, fastened into the wall in such a way that the prisoner cannot tear it loose, is a portrait of the slain woman. Lighting so that it is visible at all hours during him when he awakens and when he drops to sleep, the woman's smiling countenance gazes full into his eyes.

"The method of the third degree" has secured many confessions in Italy. It has in some prisoners insane.

One of the leading detectives at work on the case said to-day: "Charlton is either under arrest or will be within twenty-four hours."

Hunt Body With Dynamite.

In spite of the declarations of many persons whose stories in the main coincide to the effect that Charlton was seen alive, several days after the murder, the supporters of the theory that he was killed by the murderer of his wife to-day maintained a vigorous search, discounting the evidence of those on whose stories the opposite theory is based. The hunt for the body of the husband was pushed with renewed vigor, and a third effort to locate his body, if it is in the lake, was made with searching hooks.

If this fails, use dynamite," was the order given out to-day, and preparations to cause an explosion in the lake in the hope of bringing the body to the surface were made. Premier Luzzatti, in his capacity of Minister of the Interior, himself gave the order for the renewed dragging of the lake, and to him every development of the tragedy is reported by detail as it is bared. Both Signor Luzzatti and Count Guiglia to-day were in communication with the Swiss authorities and the wires from Rome and Como to Geneva were kept hot for hours.

Indicates Accomplices.

The testimony of Signora Elisa Caprani, the postmistress of Moltrasio, has been carefully kept from the knowledge of Ispolatoff, whose case has benefited materially by it. That Charlton himself imposed the unstamped letters to go to Russia, telling him of the intended departure from the villa, partially upsets the theory that the Russian himself wrote it to establish an alibi. It does not clear up, however, the enigma of the duplicate letter found in the villa. "The thing which it indicates most clearly," said one detective to-day, "is that Ispolatoff and Charlton were accomplices."

Besides the veiled woman in black, who displayed such an interest in the case, departing when she learned of Ispolatoff's arrest, the police have been ordered to find a Dane named Delaporte, close friend of the smuggling Russian. It was with Delaporte, the police have learned, that Ispolatoff returned to his room at Romano Wednesday night, and not with Charlton-day night, and gave the impression that the entire time had been spent in the company of the Dane.

The theory that the death of Estelle Reid, the rich American artist, whose body was recently found in the Bay of Naples, is connected with the Como crime, is again occupying the authorities, following the advancement of many arguments in favor of the theory by the Milan newspaper, Il Secolo. The inclination of the police to call the Rebi mystery a suicide instead of admitting that they are baffled is declared to be a barrier to the reopening of that case.

DIES AFTER ATTEMPT TO KILL COMMANDER

BUDA PEST, June 15.—A Macedonian revolutionist to-day fired five shots at Lieutenant Varesanh, commander of the Austrians forces at Sarajevo, Bosnia, and then committed suicide as he was seized. The lieutenant was not wounded. The would-be assassin was identified as Pantin Kanjlo, a leader of the revolutionary party in Macedonia. The attempted assassination indicates that a policy of violence has been begun against the Austrians who hold Bosnia, in which thousands of Macedonians live. The attempted assassination occurred as the lieutenant was riding along the principal street.

GLIDDEN TOUR RACERS NOW IN KENTUCKY

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 15.—Promptly at 7 a. m. the pace-making car of the Glidden tourists rolled out of Lincoln Square to blaze the way for the second leg of the tour to Nashville, Tenn. One by one the contestants followed, and in forty minutes a trail of cobwell and a pungent order of gasoline were all that remained in Louisville of the Gliddenites.

The cars were parked in Library Square all night. Two machine guns were posted at the entrance of the square and a detail of policemen stood guard over the cars, not from fear that they might be stolen, but to prevent tampering with them. The tourists enjoyed their brief stay in the Kentucky metropolis and were presented with packages containing the customary Kentucky souvenirs. Never a time at least any car that runs short of gasoline will have a substitute.

The route the cars took to-day brought the first rough travelling of the journey. From Louisville to Bowling Green the path was through a hilly, broken and not very populous country, where the roads afford hard journeying.

SHIP WITH TWELVE LONG OVERDUE

The Boston barkentine John S. Emery, one of the Emery fleet, is now long overdue on a passage to Buenos Ayres from here. Loden with 688,865 feet of lumber, the Emery sailed on March 3, and under ordinary circumstances should have completed the 7,000-mile run in sixty days at the least.

She is now forty-three days over this average time, and fully a month overdue. The Emery, which carried a crew of twelve men, was commanded by Captain Wellington Coombs.

Commissioner Gore has set $16,000 as the limit to be paid for clothing this year.

DRAPER SIGNS NEW HARBOR TUNNEL BILL

Governor Draper to-day signed the bill authorizing the Boston & Eastern Electric Railroad to construct a tunnel under Boston Harbor, with terminal at Post Office square.

Section 2 of the bill provides that the new North shore trolley road, from Boston to Salem and Danvers, may construct, operate and maintain a tunnel under the harbor from some convenient point in East Boston to some convenient point in the city of Boston proper. The tunnel may, with the consent of the railroad commission and of the Elevated, be connected with the Washington-street tunnel.

The incorporators of the Boston & Eastern electric railroad include Melville Woodbury, Beverly; Arthur E. Jenks, New York; William H. Gove, Salem; Clarence S. Brown, New York; William B. Nichols, Salem; William E. Bixby, Haverhill; John H. Linehan, Beverly; Arthur Sturgis, Brookline; Harry P. Grace, Lowell, and Fred A. Norton, Salem.

This company has been waging a four-year fight for location and authorization to build a harbor tunnel. MacArthur Bros. of New York are to build the road. Of the nineteen stations proposed for the line, Fourteen are at points of traffic congestion. The road is to be double tracked all the way and is to run on a thirty-minute schedule from Postoffice square, Boston, to Lynn square. The Boston-Danvers run is to take twenty-three minutes.

COLT FASTS 51 DAYS IN WELL

ELI, Neb., June 15.—George Hamilton's colt has decided the question of how long a horse can live without food or water. Hamilton has a ranch, where 500 horses range over a 10,000-acre pasture. The colt that decided the question is two years old. Ten horses were missed, among them the colt. The ranch was searched and all but the colt were found. No trace of it was discovered. Then the search was abandoned.

Fifty-one days after the colt disappeared a ranger heard a whinny as he rode past an abandoned well. Looking down he saw the colt, half covered with snow. It was much the worse for its experience, but still had plenty of life in it.

Ropes were tied about it and it was raised the ten feet to the surface, too weak to stand. It was gradually fed and is now as lively a colt as the ranch boasts.

The Society has received from Elisha Gunn $25, net proceeds from "An Old Friend," $72; balance of bequest from Miss Marian S. Shattuck, $443; bequest from Mary E. Hough, $52. Donations for the memorial fund include $25 from "C. H. T." and $25 from Mr. and Mrs. Alex S. Porter, making the total amount for this purpose to date, $38,027.

LITTLE GIRL BURNED AT BONFIRE PLAY

Concetta Cerriello, the five-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carmelo Cerriello of No. 207 Endicott street, North End is at the Relief Hospital suffering from burns received while she was playing near a bonfire.

The child, from the story of the other children, who were present, had ignored a bonfire by herself, and procuring matches in some way was about to ignite it when her skirt caught fire.

CINCINNATI, June 15.—Formal dismissal of the charges of lunacy against Mrs. Jeanne Stewart Ford, "the woman in the case" of Charles L. Warriner, defaulting local treasurer of the Big Four Railroad, was entered in the Probate Court of Hamilton County. The dismissal of the lunacy charges leaves Mrs. Ford free of all formal charges and indictments growing out of the Warriner case.

O'Brien, well known newspaper man of Boston and prominent in Catholic organizations, takes place to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock from the Church of St. John the Evangelist at Winthrop. The interment will be at St. Mary's Cemetery, old Dorchester. Mr. O'Brien died at his home, No. 30 Coral avenue, Ocean Spray, Winthrop, after a short illness of pneumonia.

WALTHAM, June 15.—Bessie Doucett, eight years old, was reported to the police as missing from her home, No. 97 Adams street.

The child left her home and the last seen of her was in the vicinity of the electric car barns. She has light hair and blue eyes. She wore a blue and white dress and black shoes and stockings.

GIRL, 19, JILTED IS TIRED OF LIFE

NEW YORK, June 15.—Ida Durrett, nineteen years old, drank a bottle of acid and leaped from the roof of the five-story building in which she lives. The girl wrote a note just before she climbed to the roof. It read: "Dear Ma—I don't want to live any longer. I am tired of life. He has been a fool of me."

CHINA FEARS RUSSIAN FORCE

PEKIN, June 15.—Persistent reports that Russia is mobilizing a division of troops at Klankhta, on the Mongolian border, have prompted China to inquire whether it is true, and if so what is its purpose. The Russian legation disclaims all knowledge of any such movement.

The reports emanate from Tokio and are, it is asserted, based on confidential advices to the Japanese War Department from its military agents in Siberia.

Diplomats here construe it as an effort on the part of Russia or Japan, or both, to bluff China, with the hope of affecting pending questions.

Tokio cable dispatches say that a cabinet crisis is threatened. It is reported that Prince Yamagata, leader of the army party who put Marquis Katshura in power, has broken with the Premier over the latter's navy increase policy.

TO BUILD COURT IN SOUTH BOSTON

A new courthouse for the peninsular district may be part of the "Boom South Boston" movement. Following a sudden visit to the courthouse, the members of the Boston City Council believe that the present structure is a disgrace to the city and that an appropriation should be passed to build another building or remodel the present structure. Judge Joseph J. Fallon said to-day:

"The Council did not come here at my request. Doubtless they had been urged on by South Boston citizens. Councilman Kenny is a South Boston resident. It will cost a great deal to remodel this building. If a new one is built it should be erected somewhere in this vicinity, which is central between the two South Boston police stations."

DEATH OF W. H. COGGINS.

William H. Coggins, eighty-four, and for over half a century a resident of Winthrop, died at his home, No. 24 Belcher street, in that town, as the result of injuries received by falling off a roof he was repairing at No. 240 Pleasant street.

KNOX SPEAKS OF THE SPIRIT AND PURPOSE OF U. S. DIPLOMACY

PHILADELPHIA, June 15.—Philander C. Knox, Secretary of State, delivered an address to-day at the commencement exercises of the University of Pennsylvania entitled, "The Spirit and Purpose of American Diplomacy." He said in part:

Since American statecraft had its beginning in an effort to secure recognition for a young nation struggling to relieve itself from what it considered to be intolerable oppressions, it is but natural that its earliest diplomatists should have been actuated and guided by broad principles of international right, justice and equity, as well as by large and fundamental considerations of humanity.

Representing a small and belligerent nation, beset with difficulties of discipline, organization, equipment, men and finance, and realizing in the fullest measure, as they did, how near they were to losing, because of those deficiencies, their every struggle for what, in their opinion, was a just and righteous cause, it is not strange that these men should have later sought for some method of adjusting their international difficulties other than by the lawless uncertainties of war.

Therefore, in negotiating the treaty of 1794, John Jay, finding it impossible at the moment definitely to adjust with Great Britain certain boundary disputes along our frontier, as well as other differences affecting the citizens of the two countries, preferred to provide that such disputes should be settled by an arbitration rather than to leave them as open questions capable, at any time, of irritating the two Governments into renewed conflict, and it must ever be said to the credit of the Government and the negotiators of the Mother country that, realizing as they must have realized, the great advantage which they might with reason hope to obtain through a armed settlement of these questions, they still were not unwilling to join with the United States in negotiating a treaty which provided for the settlement of these disputes by peaceful means.

First Case of Arbitration.

By this treaty the two governments ushered in "the modern era of arbitration." Well might Mr. Hamilton say to those who sought to discredit Jay and his work because of these provisions that "it would be a horrid and destructive principle if nations could not determine a dispute about the title to a particular parcel of territory by ruinable agreement or by submission to arbitration as its substitute, but would be under an indispensable obligation to prosecute the dispute by an appeal to real danger to the existence of one of the parties should justify, by the plea of extreme necessity, a surrender of its pretensions."

From this date, 1794, until the present time, the general conduct of the United States has uniformly and constantly exhausted every resource in order amicably and peaceably to adjust its international difficulties, and during this time it has, including those now pending, taken part in some seventy arbitrations, excluding various agreements to arbitrate not carried out because of settlement otherwise, as well as all conventional or diplomatic arrangements, delimitation commissions and domestic commissions for the settlement of international claims.

The same just, friendly and generous American spirit is conspicuously shown in our diplomatic and other efforts in the interest of particular nations at critical times and in respect to matters of great consequence affecting the welfare of other nations.

Dealings with China.

For example, from the very commencement of our intercourse with China, American diplomacy in that empire has been marked by a just regard for the rights of China as a sovereign power and has consistently aimed to promote the interests of the Chinese people no less than those of our own. Not infrequently, indeed, it has been occasion in disinterested mediation on behalf of China, and it is within its power at the present time to render valuable aid to the Chinese Government in enabling it to secure the full measure of its sovereign rights.

While the Chinese forces had been defeated by the victorious advance of the Japanese in Manchuria in 1895, the American government exerted its good offices to bring about a cessation of hostilities and the negotiation of a treaty of peace. A former Secretary of State rendered like military exertions to those provinces, encouraged and aided in preserving order, strict neutrality, and finally brought about the negotiation of a protocol. New Hampshire, which resulted in a treaty of peace, in which the sovereignty of China in the region concerned was unequivocally recognized.

Always Friendly to Japan.

As in China, so in Japan, the helpful and friendly spirit of American diplomacy has been constantly manifest.

The history of modern Japan began with the landing of Commodore Perry in 1853 when, overcoming the obstacles that had baffled every previous effort, he succeeded in opening that country to foreign intercourse. His achievement was justly hailed both in Europe and America, as a great triumph of peaceful diplomacy.

Nowhere is this fact better understood or more readily acknowledged than in Japan itself. Nine years ago a stone tablet was unveiled at Kurihama, Japan, in commemoration of the landing of Perry on that spot forty-eight years before. The tablet was erected by funds subscribed by the Japanese Court and people, and the inscription was written by Japan's greatest statesman—one of the foremost statesmen of the world—the late Prince Ito. In the course of the ceremony, the presiding officer said: "This monument is erected to preserve on stone our determination never to forget the friendship of the United States that sent Commodore Perry to us in a peaceful way to open up intercourse with foreign powers." It has been truly said that "such an occasion and such a tribute are without a parallel in the history of nations."

The modern progress of Japan, which began with the arrival of Commodore Perry, has been advanced and assisted at every stage by the disinterested friendship of the United States. Japan's earliest attempts at a reorganized government were based upon the American model, and American ideals shaped her educational and financial institutions. American advisers assisted in the development of agriculture, a postal system and foreign intercourse. America, alone of the foreign powers, returned the indemnity exacted after the attack upon foreign vessels at Shimonoseki in 1863.

In 1886 an extradition treaty was negotiated between the two countries, on a reciprocal basis, largely as stated by President Cleveland at the time, "because of the support which its consummation would give to Japan in her efforts towards judicial autonomy and complete sovereignty." A like spirit has been manifested in the treaties signed in 1894, were framed on the liberal lines of those previously been advocated by the United States.

On This Hemisphere.

From the time the United States became an independent nation this Government, while respecting its obligations to European powers, has frankly and consistently sought for the establishment and maintenance of a popular, free, and independent form of government for the countries which share with us this hemisphere. Just emerged from our own war of independence, the struggle of the southern republics awoke a responsive chord in the heart of the American people, and in 1822 this Government hastened to recognize as sovereign States the republics of Spanish South America, and named Ministers to represent it at their capitals. So in the case of Brazil, the heritage of Portugal's vast domain in America, the United States was first to recognize its independence.

A few years before, President Monroe had promulgated the doctrine which bears his name, and the Holy Alliance had failed in its efforts to restore South America to the crowns of Spain and Portugal. Some years later Europe sought to impose the military power an Emperor upon Mexico, but after a difficult early years our Government's intense interest and active support were invariably found on the side of liberty and republicanism for all the free and equal republics of the Americas.

Turning to modern examples, by the Spanish-American treaty signed at Paris in 1898 and its accompanying protocols this Government, to the surprise of the world, spontaneously, and by action for which history scarcely affords a precedent, recognized the independence of Cuba.

The invariable fervid and inherent sentiment for self government has had a large part in this Government's sympathy with the recent criticism by their own long-suffering fellow-countrymen of such tyrants as Castro, whose regime has given way to better things, and Zelaya, whose cruel mismanagement it is hoped will soon be superseded by a government equally responsible and republican.

And the 20 per cent not so installed seriously infringe on the patents which we now control.

The End of High Prices

But in bringing together all of the important Stationary Vacuum Cleaning interests, we are able to offer the public a much greater benefit, even, than freedom from faulty systems and damage suits.

For we are in a position to place the manufacture of Stationary Vacuum Cleaning Systems on a business basis; to terminate the costly war of inventors; and to eliminate the extravagance and waste through which Stationary Vacuum Cleaning, in its early stages, has passed.

With all of the experimental work done, with all of the early mistakes paid for, and with the whole engineering experience of the art at our command, we propose to bring the prices of Stationary Vacuum Cleaning Systems within the reach of all.

As Essential as Steam Heat or Sanitary Plumbing

It is our belief, that Stationary Vacuum Cleaning, under the new conditions, must take its place with steam and hot water heat and with sanitary plumbing, as an essential to comfort and health.

We therefore propose to offer the new, perfected systems, not only to those who are constructing new buildings, but to those, as well, who desire to bring their present structures up to the minute in healthfulness, convenience and comfort.

Our plans are so designed that any building, old or new, can be equipped at a minimum of expense.

Ask Your Plumber or Steam Fitter

Any plumber, or steam fitter, can install our "Richmond" Stationary Vacuum Cleaning System, or give prices and descriptions.

Or we will be pleased to place our engineering department at the disposal of any architect, builder or owner with Vacuum Cleaning problems to be solved.

The convenient coupon below will bring descriptive printed matter. Address

BERLIN FLOOD DAMAGE FAR OVER MILLION

BERLIN, June 15.—Investigation of the havoc wrought in Berlin by the cloudburst which last night flooded the city to-day showed that the damage is more than $1,000,000. Several buildings were wrecked, many others damaged by lightning. The twenty persons struck by bolts were nearly all to-day declared out of danger.

All night long fire engines pumped water from the subways and the cellars of many buildings, but this morning only a beginning had been made. Two sewers were broken by the flood and in some streets the water is higher than three feet, rendered tram depth on the principal tract vacation is now overdrawn and in the low lying region lakes formed which may take days to drain away through the crippled sewer system.

The horror of the flood in the country is growing with each fresh report. The Government is making frantic efforts to send aid and relief.

Advices received to-day indicate that the dead are more than 2000 at least, and it is possible that the toll will exceed 4000. As many more bodies have been recovered which may have been swept miles by the flooded streets.

Besides the Government to-day declared that the floods in the vicinity of Oberan region were subsiding. It is known that the situation there is still serious. Another in Berlin are making desperate attempts to get into communication with those who have returned to attend the Pasdon Play.

LOCOMOTIVE PLAYS FOOTBALL WITH MAN

MIDDLEBORO, June 15.—To be struck with a locomotive twice inside of a mile and yet escape with minor injuries is to most that William Card of Central Pocum make. He was walking across the several freight yards when the shifting engine came bowling from behind a string of freight cars, and before he could collect himself Card was struck and was rolling in the air. When he came down the engine, which had not been entirely stopped, gave him another bump and sent him twenty feet into a pile of sand. He was taken home, but no bones were broken, he is suffering from bruises and a general shaking up. On the way home Mr. Card remarked: "Never again across the freight yards. His escape from death is pronounced miraculous.

CASHIER MISSING; $18,000 SHORTAGE

MOUNT HOLLY, N. J., June 15.—After having defied the efforts of six locksmiths, the door of the vault of the Mount Holly National bank was drilled and the safe opened. Assistant Cashier Clifford Heller has been absent since Saturday. After the safe was opened Cashier Frederick H. Lee is alleged to have discovered a shortage in the bank's funds of over $18,000. He immediately had a warrant issued for Heller's arrest. The bank holds Heller's bond for $15,000.

LOBSTER PRICE GOES SOARING

The price of lobster is rapidly going up and it will pay the Johnnies who frequent the restaurants in the vicinity of the Scollay Bolt to glance over the bill of fare well before ordering it. "A La Newburg" or otherwise in the future as their bank roll is liable to suffer an attack of cramps.

The scarcity of the appetizing crustacean has sent the prices soaring and before promises soon to become a luxury which none but a few will be able to afford. Since Tuesday the price has jumped from twelve dollars to twenty-one dollars a crate and if it continues to rise everything at present indicates terrapin will look like a ham sandwich compared with a "broiled live."

The rise is due to the fact that the Nova Scotia season has closed, and no lobsters are being received here from the provinces. The price is now between sixteen and eighteen cents a pound. Manufacturers are increasing in price, though coming in fair quantities.

RABBI FLEISCHER'S IDEAS ON HARMONY

My server, these sixteen years has been devoted to promoting goodwill between Jews and Christians, emphasizing the universal elements of Judaism, and standing unconquerably for liberty, truth and truth; for me, hold that both Judaism and Christianity are but incidents in the development of the spirituality and idealism of the human race. All the religions have this one interest and duty in common. Sholer Christ Fleischer in an address to congregation to the Congregation Adath Israel.

TWO CAPTURED IN POLICE CHASE AS HOLDUP MEN

After a long chase through the South End that wound up with a desperate struggle with two police officers of the East Dedham street station early to-day, two young men whom it is alleged held up and robbed Thomas Cropan of No. 116 Malden street were captured.

They gave their names as James Harrington, twenty-three, who says he lives at No. 563 Tuled street, South Boston, and Bernie Duffy, twenty-two, cleaning contractor at No. 500 West Eighth street, South Boston.

According to Cropan he was walking along Harrison avenue on his way home when directly opposite the Boston Elevated power station he was attacked by Harrington and Duffy. One of them, he declares, stole his watch. His cries attracted the attention of Patrolmen Livingston and Cerroll of the East Dedham street station who started in pursuit of the pair. The fugitives turned and gave battle to the policemen.

At the station they were searched and, according to the police, the stolen property was recovered, and both were identified by Cropan as the men who had robbed him. In one of Harrington's stockings another gold watch was found, attached to which was a leather chain bearing a small engraving of the State House. He refused to tell the police how he came to be in possession of this second watch.

NEW MEDICAL DISCOVERY

For All Skin Troubles.

A chemist who was convinced that the old method of taking internal remedies to cure skin diseases was erroneous, has discovered that an extract from a particular part of a well-known tree possessed antiseptic and curative properties on the skin tissues. It was, however, found that this valuable vegetable extract was difficult to compound with other ingredients necessary to present it in a form convenient to use. After further investigations and experiments a method of special treatment was devised, resulting in a combination of ingredients possessing to a marked degree valuable therapeutic properties, the like of which has never before been produced. This important product is known as Cadum. Since its introduction Cadum has cured many cases of chronic eczema and other unsightly, irritating and distressing skin diseases, and this after other treatments have failed. Cadum stops the terrible itching of eczema at once, and begins the healing process with the first application. Its action is still more remarkable in less serious skin troubles, such as hives, pimples, blotches, tetter, itch, acne, herpes, scaly skin, psoriasis, ringworm, rash chafings, eruptions, sores, itching piles, scurvy, blackheads, scabs, etc. Many of the results effected by Cadum may be truly called remarkable. It destroys disease-producing germs, allays inflammation, and is soothing and healing to the skin. Trial box 10c.; large box 25c.

All Value-Records Broken In Hilton's Sale of Suits At One-Quarter Off

FIVE years ago they said it was impossible to fly in an airship for any distance. Glenn H. Curtiss silenced the skeptics by his recent marvelous flight from New York to Albany, and now Hamilton has just broken all records by his flight from New York to Philadelphia and return.

Two years ago they said it was impossible for the American workingman to afford an all-wool suit. A Hilton suit which was exhibited before the Tariff Committee at Washington disproved this claim.

And today, Hilton is doing the seemingly impossible again by selling suits at One-Quarter Off this early in the season.

Values impossible to the regular retailer are possible to the Hilton Company, manufacturing Clothiers. These prices prove it.

All Stationary Vacuum Cleaning Patents Brought Under One Control

The art of Vacuum Cleaning has been developed and perfected not by any one man, but by many men working independently.

One man, Kenney, the Father of Vacuum Cleaning in America, owned patents which gave him a virtual monopoly of the most vital ideas in Vacuum Cleaning.

Other men, several of them, controlled patents so essential to perfect Vacuum Cleaning that no good system could be installed without infringing on them.

But no one man, nor any body of men, has ever heretofore controlled a range of patents wide enough to cover the installation of a single complete Vacuum Cleaning System.

Each inventor, in building up a system around his own ideas, has infringed on others.

And the result of this war of inventors has been that the public has had the choice of accepting imperfect systems—or of inviting a storm of damage suits for infringements.

The First Perfect, Complete System

What we have done is to bring all of the important cleaning patents under one control.

So that now, for the first time, it is possible to offer a perfect, complete Stationary Vacuum Cleaning System embodying all of the ingenuities of all of the best inventors.

So that now, for the first time, it is possible to offer a Stationary Vacuum Cleaning System which can be installed without fear of infringement and damage suits.

The Protection of Eighty-five Patents

We now own or control eighty-five patents, including not only the Kenney and Mallette patents, but all other patents necessary to produce the most perfect and complete Stationary Vacuum Cleaning System known to the art today.

Fully 80 per cent of all Stationary Vacuum Cleaning Systems now installed in America have been installed by firms, which, under the present arrangements, are retiring in our favor, including The American Air Cleaning Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; The Vacuum Cleaner Co., New York, N. Y.; Sanitary Devices Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill.

WARNING

All persons are warned that henceforth all authorized stationary vacuum cleaning plants will bear The McCrum-Howell Company license plate. Systems offered without The McCrum-Howell Company license are infringements and will subject not only the makers thereof but also the purchasers and those who use them to damage suits which in all cases will be promptly instituted. Please refuse to buy for The McCrum-Howell Company license plate, which is to be found in each case on the vacuum producing apparatus.

CHIEF OF "AD" MEN COMES TO VISIT BOSTON

S. C. Dobbs of Atlanta, Ga., president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, and one of the best-known advertising men in the country, is in Boston for a brief stay. He has just been at Belgrade Lake, Me., on a vacation trip with his sturdy son, S. C. Dobbs, Jr. The elder Dobbs's fishing vacation was rather a misnomer, for he arrived at Belgrade with his right arm stiff from driving his automobile up from Portland in the rain. Young Dobbs was able to fish for himself and for father, however. He landed several trout and upheld the piscatorial honor of the Dobbs family like a veteran.

Mr. Dobbs is general manager for the Coca Cola Company, whose headquarters are in Atlanta. He started in as a barefooted errand boy in the little drug store where Coca Cola was made, and climbed up with the business. He is a Southerner, he has a Yankee hustle. The Associated Advertising Clubs of America, of which he is the new head, includes 5,000 members.

As president of the A. A. C. of A., Mr. Dobbs insists on clean, straight, truthful advertising. Advertising, to him, is a profession. He regards the A. A. C. of A. as an institution in which all legitimate forms of publicity should find expression. His motto is "Clean, dependable advertising."

Dobbs, Senior and Junior, arrived in Boston last night. They were entertained at the City Club at luncheon at noon to-day by the Pilgrim Publicity Association, the veteran Boston organization of "ad" men. Mr. Dobbs spoke on "Believable Advertising," in which he enunciated the straightforward publicity principles which he advocates.

Not the least interested listener in the audience, of course, was Dobbs, Junior, who vastly admires hearing "Dad" make speeches.

Judge Robert O. Harris of the Massachusetts Superior Bench was another speaker at the noon luncheon to-day.

This afternoon Mr. Dobbs took his son to Lexington and Concord. The lad has just been studying about "the shot heard round the world" and other high lights in American history. The trip had unusual fascination for him. It keenly interested the father, too, who was a boy in the reconstruction period of the South.

To-morrow they leave for Montreal.

MARK TWAIN'S NIECE WINS CORNELL PRIZE

ITHACA, N. Y., June 15.—Miss Ida Langdon of Elmira, a niece of Mark Twain, has been awarded the $150 Guilford literary prize by Cornell University for her essay submitted in competition with other graduate students. The prize was founded by the late James B. Guilford to promote excellence in literary composition. Miss Langdon is a graduate of Bryn Mawr in the class of 1903 and is at present working for her master degree at Cornell University.

WAS FIRST SEWING MACHINE WORKER

WINSTED, Ct., June 15.—The first woman who ever took a stitch on a sewing machine has just celebrated her eightieth birthday here. She is Miss Elizabeth M. Kilbourn of No. 81 Wheeler street. She was a school teacher in New Hartford when Elias Howe, inventor of the sewing machine, lived there. She visited his workshop one day when he had finished his first machine. He had her take stitches in a piece of cloth, and then told her she was the first woman to operate the machine.

YALE ATHLETE GETS A WEDDING LICENSE

NEW YORK, June 15.—John Dekoven Bowen, a stalwart Yale athlete, who is to graduate this year, visited the City Hall to-day with Miss Elizabeth Winthrop Stevens, prominent in the youngest social set of this city, and obtained a marriage license. Three years ago Bowen was announced suitor for Miss Stevens's hand, Miss Stevens is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ledyard Stevens. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Tilton Bowen of Chicago.

146 DEGREES GIVEN BY BROWN UNIVERSITY

PROVIDENCE, June 15.—With the simple ceremonies which have made Brown commencements so impressive for generations, 146 students, 30 of whom were of the women's college, were awarded their degrees at the 142d annual commencement of Brown University to-day. The exercises were held in the old First Baptist meeting house, which for 135 years has been used for one of the purposes of its erection—"to hold commencements in." Seven honorary degrees were conferred.

Marshal Alfred Lowell Brett '10 of South Braintree, Marshal V. A. Joslin of Providence and their aides, sonorously impressive in black frock coats and silk hats, led the long line, followed by the undergraduates and the alumni from the elms of '60 to that of '70.

The exercises in the church were brief. After a short prayer by President W. H. P. Faunce, the commencement speakers delivered their orations. The orators were Maxwell Barus, Providence; Gough Decatur McIlmaile, Baltimore, the first negro who ever won the Gaston medal, the highest prize awarded by the university; Clifton Henry Walcott, Leominster, Mass., president of the senior class, and Albert Arnold Bennett, Providence.

BRODERS PRESIDENT OF CIGARMAKERS

After one of the liveliest contests ever waged in the organization, Edward Broders to-day was declared elected president of Cigarmakers' Union No. 97 by a vote of 663 to 554 for Fritz Wolfer, his nearest competitor, while Henry Abrahams was unanimously re-elected secretary for his fortieth consecutive term. Other officers elect are: James A. Bedell, vice-president; William E. Kinder, re-elected secretary-treasurer; Michael Park, re-elected sergeant-at-arms for his thirtieth term. Fifteen hundred votes in all were cast. The final tabulation for the minor offices will not be completed until Friday morning.

"FLYING FISH" TO TRY AGAIN

NEWBURYPORT, June 15.—A. L. Pfitzner of New York is to-day preparing to fly back from Rowley to Plum Island a distance of seven miles, in W. Starling Burgess's biplane, "Flying Fish." In the "Flying Fish" last evening Pfitzner flew from the Burgess aerodrome to Rowley, William Hallard, at the same time, tried to get away with his machine, but failed.

The "Flying Fish" rose nicely from the ground and skimmed away across the marshes toward Rowley. During the entire flight the "Flying Fish" was never more than fifty feet above the ground. The average height Mr. Pfitzner chose was about thirty feet, as the flight was more of a tryout than anything else.

When about a half-mile from the Rowley railroad station he undertook to land. In doing so his machine struck in a marsh and the front elevator was broken. Early to-day Norman Prince of Boston got two mechanics and the machine was repaired. Pfitzner started back for Plum Island, but gone only a short distance when the propeller shaft broke, necessitating his coming. The men began to make the necessary repairs, the engine being taken aboard he expects to fly back to Plum Island to-night.

WRIGHTS LOSE AIRSHIP SUIT

NEW YORK, June 15.—Orville and Wilbur Wright lost a point in their court fight to protect the patents covering their aeroplane from alleged infringements by Glenn H. Curtiss and Louis Paulhan, the French aviator.

By unanimous decision the United States Court of Appeals vacated the temporation injunctions obtained by the Wright Company against Paulhan and the Herring-Curtiss company, pending trial of suits which will determine whether there is any infringement in fact.

The decision cites that the only question involved is whether in the defendant's aeroplane the tendency to swerve or spin is counteracted by means of a vertical rudder. Following the original decision numerous affidavits were submitted by both sides, which presented sharp conflict in the evidence.

Under the circumstances, the court says, the infringement is not so clearly established as to justify a preliminary injunction.

The order against the Herring-Curtiss company was granted some time ago at Buffalo by Judge Hazel.

KANSAS CITY FLYER HALTED

TOPEKA, Kan., June 15.—On a cross-country flight to Kansas City, J. C. Mars left Topeka at 5:10 a. m. to-day. He made a good start and was soon out of sight. Mars, who was trying to capture the $2,000 prize offered for the first flight between the two cities, was halted four-teen miles east of Topeka, when his engine broke down. After landing he repaired it and started again. The distance was about sixty miles.

A dispatch from Lawrence, the first stopping place permitted in flight, says that Mars got under way after his breakdown at 7:30. Great crowds assembled all along the route, especially at Lawrence and Olathe, the two places that had been chosen for halting places.

Mars was caught in a squall just as he was rounding Enoch Bluff, near Midland, and was forced to descend. He had difficulty crossing the river and several parts of the machine were broken. He repaired his machine at Midland and started again about 9 a. m., landing four miles north of Lawrence, Kan., at 10:06 a. m. with his radiator leaking.

BISHOP'S PROTEST AT WORK CHANGES

I am opposed to the proposed change in the charter of the college making it non-sectarian. The agnostics do not make all the money in the world, and I trust I shall not be striking too serious a note if I express the hope that our college will not for a few paltry thousands barter away its birthright.—Bishop Frederick Burgess at meeting of Brown University Alumni.

MINISTER PIERCE INJURED IN AUTO

CHRISTIANIA, Norway, June 15.—Herbert H. D. Pierce, the American minister to Norway, had his arm broken and his wife and nieces were slightly injured in an automobile accident. The driver of the automobile in attempting to avoid a horse car ran the machine into a boulder and it was overturned.

ARKANSAS NEGRO QUIETLY LYNCHED

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 15.—A mob to-day lynched William Hunter, a negro, at Star City, and riddled his body with bullets. The mob overpowered the authorities who had the negro in custody. No one in the town knew of the affair save the mob until the body was found.

12 KILLED IN NIAGARA FIRE

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., June 15.—Twelve Hungarians were burned to death in a shack at Falls View, Ont., early to-day. Eight others were badly burned and are in a Niagara Falls hospital. The origin of the fire is yet unknown, but it is presumed was caused by carelessness for some one in an all-night carousal at Niagara Falls, following a carnival and celebration.

The men were employes of the Ontario Power Company and were sleeping like rats in a poorly constructed tenement. This loss of life is the greatest in the history of the Falls district from fire. The Hungarians whose lives were snuffed out were members of the day gang of the power company. When the night shift relieved the day gang most of the latter journeyed to Niagara Falls, Ont., where a carnival was being held. They indulged in the festivities and drank too freely.

ROOSEVELT BUREAU SEES CONSPIRACY TO ROB HIM OF GLORY

Returning Caesar's Aides, Says W. R. Hearst, Have Sent Warning to Stay-at-Home June 18 Conspirators.

MR. HEARST SAYS:

Perhaps our Irish citizens would prefer not to indorse Roosevelt's advocacy of greater force in domination of subject races. Then, according to Mr. Roosevelt, they would be conspirators.

Perhaps the Hungarian followers of Kossuth and the Polish admirers of Kosciusko might refuse to support Roosevelt's new American doctrine of European imperialism. Then they, too, would be conspirators.

Suppose our Jewish citizens should prefer American "sentimentality" to the violence and injustice of European system. Then they would be conspirators, and the imperial edict would be against them.

How our real soldiers would like to protest against this opera bouffe "return of our general," how they would like to unmask this man of poses and phrases, attitudes and platitudes.

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, June 14.—The newspapers abroad have been informed that a conspiracy has been uncovered in the United States.

This conspiracy is widespread, according to the Roosevelt literary bureau, and vicious in the extreme. It menaces the foundations of society and obstructs the march of civilization. It threatens to interfere with the imperial progress of the country along the lines which Mr. Roosevelt has personally taken the trouble to think out for it.

The immediate and most treasonable and inexcusable and unpardonable object of the conspiracy is to render unto our returning Caesar something less of adulation than Caesar thinks is rightly his.

"WOULD BE HEINOUS CONSPIRATORS."

If a plain American citizen of the old school, who believes in the Republicanism of Lincoln and the Democracy of Jefferson, shall not turn out and make obeisance to Mr. Roosevelt on his return, that citizen will be a conspirator—nothing more nor less. If a sober thinking citizen, with some employment or some business interest, would rather attend to his employment or his business on the day of Mr. Roosevelt's return than rush to applaud the reckless individual who so lately and so largely interfered with employment and upset business, that citizen may consider himself a conspirator.

The Roosevelt press service has sent forth the word. Some citizens, in spite of Mr. Roosevelt's support of force and violence in the government of subject peoples, may still believe in government with the consent of the governed, in the right of man to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, and may stay at home on the day of Mr. Roosevelt's advent to reread the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States, but those persons would be heinous conspirators. Heaven have mercy upon them!

The conspiracy is possibly more extensive and more dangerous than any one imagines. It may embrace the partisans of freedom and nationality in all the countries who have come to America in the hope of finding a full realization of the liberty and justice, the equality and opportunity which our Government was founded to secure.

Perhaps our Irish citizens, who have loved and remembered Robert Emmet and Daniel O'Connell, would prefer not to indorse Roosevelt's advocacy of greater force to be England in her domination of subject races. Then these Irish citizens, like Irish martyred patriots, would be conspirators, according to Mr. Roosevelt and his literary bureau.

Has not Roosevelt himself written on page 192 of his life of Governeur Morris: "Scotland and Ireland, when independent, were nests of savages."

"Our New Pasteboard Kaiser."

Perhaps our Italian citizens, who have been inspired by the teachings of Mazzini and the example of Garibaldi, and perhaps the Hungarian followers of Kossuth and the Polish admirers of Kosciusko—who believe in freedom and nationalism, might refuse to parade in support of Roosevelt's new American doctrine of old European Imperialism. Then, they too, would be conspirators.

Suppose our German cousins who have come to America to protest against the burdens of militarism should refuse to endorse the Roosevelt policy of arbitrary rule and military domination, and should decline to drag in triumph the paper mache chariot of our new pasteboard Kaiser. Then they would be conspirators as well.

Suppose, finally, that our Jewish citizens who have flown to this land of political freedom and religious liberty to avoid the persecution and oppression of imperial Russia should prefer the "sentimentality" of our American institutions to the "violence and injustice" of European systems. Then they would be conspirators and the imperial edict would be pronounced against them. Certain Protestant citizens who object to being called "bigots" and certain Catholic citizens who object to having the revered head of their church attacked in magazine articles at $1 per word, and certain reverent American citizens who respect ALL RIGHTFOUS RELIGIOUS SECTS and who object to the American policy of dragging religious controversy into politics, might stay away from the Roosevelt demonstration, if they did not fear that their sincere gentleness would be misinterpreted as CONSPIRACY.

Soldiers Would Like to Protest.

And the military, the real soldiers, the men who do the fighting, not the talking, the men who have many wars and got out little credit, how they would like to protest against this opera bouffe return to the Capitol! How they would like to unmask this man of poses and phrases, of attitudes and platitudes; how they would like to expose this ephemeral colonel who, with his men in San Juan Hill and then, with the assistance of the negro troops, led them down again; how they would like to unmask this man of peace and then, with the assistance of the negro troops, led them down again; how they would like to unmask this man of peace and phrases, of attitudes and platitudes; how they would like to expose this ephemeral colonel who, with his men in San Juan Hill

COLEMAN SHIELDING BANK HEADS, DECLARES COAKLEY

Coleman appeared before the Suffolk County grand jury. I couldn't get access at first to a transcript of the testimony that he gave before this jury. I had heard some things about it and I questioned him before you before I had been denied by the District Attorney access to the transcript of Coleman's evidence which the District Attorney had. You remember the contest for those records, and I finally received them, but not without a struggle which the District Attorney attempted to thwart at every turn.

"Coleman Champion Liar."

"The judge allowed them in and you will have them in your room for deliberation and you will be able to see the champion liar that Coleman is.

"When I first questioned Coleman on his testimony before the Grand Jury, he knew that I didn't have the transcript of his testimony and he felt pretty sure that I wouldn't get it. He laughed at my questions, cast glances across to his friends here close to you gentlemen, and his answers were, 'No, I certainly not,' 'No, certainly not,' 'No, certainly not never said it,' and when he got through he chuckled and stepped from the stand with the jaunty air of self-confidence and the air too, of a young man who had done something pretty good.

"Here are some of the questions that I put to him and his answers. I didn't say that I didn't need to be introduced to Jack. I asked him if he didn't say that he loaned money to Keliher and he said, 'No.' I asked him if he didn't say that he met Jack only once before and he said, 'No, never said it.'

"I asked him if he didn't say that he didn't know Jack's last name and he said, 'No, I never said that.'

More Denials by Coleman.

"I asked him if he didn't say that Keliher was never at the bank and his answer was, 'No, never testified to any such thing.'

I asked him if he didn't say that Keliher went broke in August and his answer was, 'No, never said it.' And then I asked him if he didn't say under oath that he knew never knew where he was getting this money, that Keliher never told him where he was getting the money and that he knew Keliher never even mentioned his auspicions to him. Under oath Coleman told you that he never said such a thing before the Grand Jury.

"Well, two days later I got the Grand Jury testimony. And when I stood with this testimony in my hand and confronted him he didn't smile and chuckle, but hung his head, as he knew and knows that two days before he swore reasons that he didn't want to answer.

"As I asked him the very same questions that I asked him two days before, he admitted having signed the testimony before the Suffolk Grand Jury his answer was: 'If it is there, I said it,' and then as I went along, his answers were: 'I don't remember,' 'I don't recall,' 'I don't recall.'

"He knew that we had the Grand Jury stenographic here. And he knew that we had the testimony, for he was present during the contest for its admission. He took the reading of it himself. He knows it's there, but did you ever see such an exhibition?

"Lame, Impudent Excuse."

"And then the lame, impudent excuse which he presented to you, going to the grand jury after the recess. When asked by the District Attorney just what time he referred to when he said that he knew Mr. Keliher that he was getting the money from the bank, and that he did not see fit to keep his suspicions from him, he said that he was referring at that time to the early part of their acquaintance. He was caught. He gave in his heart that he had lied and he attempted to bolster up his testimony in order, if possible, to hide his life. And without a movement of muscle in his face Coleman stood on this stand and made a lame and impudent excuse. I know that appeal to your intelligence. Don't you know he was lying? Don't you know he was concealing. Just as he lied, concealed and deceived but at the instant of detection that he be, he did it without the wink of an eyelash.

"Coleman appeared before that body, he took oath that he would tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, but now he tells you in the courtroom that he deliberately perjured when he was before the Suffolk County grand jury. In either case, gentlemen, that he is a liar, a deliberate liar. The government in such a case is entitled and driven to make a man of this type the bad witness of the case.

"The government asks you to convict Keliher on the word of a man such as Coleman. Will you do it? Is it possible that from one of your active men will believe the perjurer, Coleman. He has perjured himself in front of all you gentlemen. On Friday he said, 'I did not conceal anything intentionally,' before the grand jury, and what I told them was the truth.' On Tuesday, a few days later he tells you, 'I deliberately lied when I was before the Suffolk county grand jury.' Are you going to believe the word of a man when you yourselves have seen perjure himself?

"Coleman Is Government's Case."

"Coleman is the government's case. Again and again he proved himself on this stand such a liar, such a liar that I don't believe you would hang a blind pup on his statements. He has confessed here that he lied before the Suffolk County Grand Jury after taking a solemn oath to tell the truth, the same oath that he has taken on this witness stand.

"If you believe Coleman all the other witnesses who have appeared here are liars.

At this point Mr. Coakley referred to the testimony of the several witnesses summoned by the government, but who did not testify until called by the defense. He laid great stress on their testimony, in which they told of Coleman telling them that he had been left a legacy by his aunt.

Reason for False Stories.

"Again, what does Coleman was on the witness stand he was asked by French, 'You have told other stories before you came to court which are different from the stories you have told here?' And Coleman replied, 'Yes, I have, and the reason was because I was in hopes of getting some money.' No I therefore told false stories.' When I cross-examined Coleman on Friday I asked him whether or not he intended to tell anything to the Suffolk Grand Jury that was not true and he said that he did not. He said that if he made any misstatements they were unintentional. But on Friday I hope you have got that in mind. I urge it is important. On Friday when I did not have the transcript of the Grand Jury testimony, Coleman said that he did not purposely conceal anything from that body, but on Tuesday, when I had the transcript and I asked him if he concealed anything from that body he said that he did.

"Now we come to the chauffeur, Gately, who was not called by the government as a witness, although he was examined by them. Gately has no earthly interest in this case. Coleman says that Gately is a friend of Dennis's. When I left Keliher's house in Winthrop that Thursday night I had no intention of going down to see Gately on Saturday night. Coleman said that Mrs. Arnold arranged each of his three meetings with Keliher, yet Gately says that Coleman told him on the first visit that he called, while going home, 'I will want you again Saturday night.'

"Who Is the Liar?"

"Gately also says that on the following Tuesday Coleman came over to him while in the ferry and said, 'I am going away for three years, but I am going to take that big guy with me if he don't come across. Gentlemen, 'come across' means money, he doesn't go up and emotionally say that he did not say that to Gately. That Gately is a liar is simply a question of which is the liar, or is it George W. Coleman who is the liar?

"The District Attorney knew of Gately's testimony. He talked with Gately and Gately was sent away. Why? Because, gentlemen, the District Attorney wasn't putting on any testimony that would help Mr. Keliher. He knew that Gately's testimony would help Keliher. Mr. French sent away those who did not help his own case. That was simply a question of tactics. Some District Attorneys feel that they should put on all the witnesses that they can get and let the jury decide. Mr. French evidently didn't have that view. He put on the witnesses who helped the government's case and sent away those who did not.

"Trying to Catch Blackmailer."

"Now what happened on the night of the conference between Coleman and Keliher, in that closet? My friend, Mr. French, has called that eavesdropping, but I think it was simply trying to catch a blackmailer. Counsel for Mr. Keliher knew that Coleman's suggestion that if Keliher did not get money for him he would drag Keliher down with him. It was the duty of counsel to catch that blackmailer if it could be done. Instead of eavesdropping being an improper or wrong thing I consider it entirely proper. If I could write down the word consider that I was doing God's honest work by going into that closet and catching that black-hearted matter.

"Coleman here says that on Saturday night previous he was offered $100,000 and he described the shocking scene of Lawyer Flaherty, who sat in the closet about as easily as I am sitting here this night, when that it was Coleman who offered Keliher $100,000 for his resignation.

"You will remember on that occasion, when Flaherty asked Coleman whether Jack Keliher, knew where Coleman was getting the money that he would get $100,000, Coleman didn't know, and I won't say you did, gentlemen, that was when Keliher's conscience-touched conscience-touched then when he was face to face with Keliher.

"Despite his years of debauchery and his utter depravity, according to his friend Coleman spoke the truth that night when he was face to face with Keliher. He had accused on the outside of knowing where he had gotten his money. And yet that did he do when he got outside again in the entrance? He returned to Keliher and he said to Gately on the way home, 'I'm going to take that fellow and put him in the ditch.' That shows what type of man he is.

"Trap was Proper Work."

"The way in which we trapped Coleman by placing a stenographer in the closet was a proper work, a correct work. Suppose a blackmailer came into your house and said he wanted $10,000 by next Saturday night or he would charge you with arson. Would you go to your wife and your lawyer would be a discredit to his profession and a fool lawyer if he did not arrange to have some person overhear the conversation between you and the blackmailer on the following Saturday night.

"Coleman tells you that he told William A. Morse that he went to Washington to get money for the bank. Do you believe that? I don't. No one would have done more to get money back for the depositors of the bank than William A. Morse would have. William A. Morse is not a man who would refuse to do anything he could to get money for those poor depositors. Coleman did not go down to see Keliher to get money for the bank, but he went there to get money for George W. Coleman.

"Wanted Money to Plant."

"Of 'Billy' Morse' good bless him! had known that Coleman was going down there to try to get money for the bank in a legitimate manner, he would have gone with him. Coleman did not go down there for that purpose. He went there to get what he could hold up Keliher and make him go to New York and get money for him so that he might plant it to use against Keliher in the trial and also to set up a defended wife in the metarbaric business she was in in New York.

"Coleman said that he had told Morse that he had never loaned Keliher a dollar. If he told Morse that, don't you believe that Morse would have done something to try and get the money for the depositors? Coleman says that Morse told him that William A. Morse never refused to try to get money for those poor depositors. Coleman says that he went to see Keliher again, against the advice of his lawyer. He went there to get money for Flaherty, Flaherty or Mamie Hightower, whichever you wish to call her.

"Same Con to Everybody."

"It was the same con that Coleman gave to everybody. He told to whom he spoke about the matter that he never had dollar of the money. You saw the witness Minahan on the stand, the man who said that Coleman said that he had left him his money. You saw the District Attorney's manner when Minahan was cross-examining Minahan. You saw him jump up and down and wave his arms. You heard him say, 'I object, I do, la, la and la, la.' That was awfully severe on the District Attorney, but then it doesn't convince juries. I will admit that Pat Minahan is not to be congratulated with the courtroom as he is with the barroom. I will admit that he has not the grace of the District Attorney that he is nodding but a raw Irish boy, but the learned District Attorney's 'la, la, la, la, la,' had notating on Pat Minahan.

"So far as the testimony is concerned, I think that Mr. Minahan put it over the District Attorney. The jurors, I think, would have been a great success if he had been on the stage when one of the lawyers ridiculed Minahan when he was on the witness stand, but did not ridicule a third man who was there and heard the same story as Pat Minahan told.

"The man I refer to was once president of the Board of Aldermen and Mayor and after the death of Mayor Collins was Mayor of Boston. This same man, Mr. Whelton, showed his good judgment when he was Mayor by employing my friend, Mr. Keliher, as his counsel. Gentlemen, Mr. Whelton told the same story in substance that Minahan told, and yet Mr. French did not cross-examine him.

Refers to Coleman's Easy Air.

"What was Coleman's attitude toward Whelton when he was on the stand? Why was the attitude of this hero of the newspapers when he was introduced to him under the name of Jones, over at the Parker House? Has the sympathy which you probably had for Coleman when you heard his story vanished? Has the confidence which you had for him seven years, which sent chills down your back, somewhat decreased since you have seen Coleman here on the stand? Did you feel watched and men closely, it must have. He has waxed about as easily with you as he has in taking things easy, as insurant and happy. He has come here to you and told you years' sentence which he got isn't fifteen years, but only five years. Is that strong enough to get some innocent victim perhaps by the grace of the government his sentence may be found to only be five years? Is that what makes him so easy? Is that what makes him feel that he gets Keliher his 20 sentence will be shortened? Is that what makes him tell the newspapers, who loves to see his name in large print, loves to see his picture in the paper with the heading, 'Coleman and Keliher Accountants,' 'Coleman at the bogyans.' And, gentlemen, if you read the Sunday papers, because if you did you saw a story of her life and her love for George—at $50 a day.

"A Purpose in It All."

"I wonder if that is simply a spectacular young man who has appeared before you who loves to tell his story here and wants to be a hero, or whether he really has a purpose in it all. He told Keliher, 'They want me to say you stole the money,' 'of course not my friend Mr. French here, but, oh, the ramifications of the secret service, Coleman said to Keliher, 'They say I'm a liar. Who says so? Why, the government sleuths. Coleman told them that Keliher did not know where he was getting the money. What did the sleuths say to receive? They said, 'You're a liar, Mr. Keliher and we will make it easier for you.'

"Coleman appeared before District Attorney French. 'I was there one day, half or two hours,' he said. 'To twenty-five questions he put to me I told him three to talk with the District Attorney his answer was, 'I don't remember.' When I asked him finally if he had lied to Mr. French his answer was, 'I don't remember.'

"His first story to French was told just about the time he took before the Suffolk County Grand Jury. It is important to note that when Coleman first appeared before that body he had made two visits to the District Attorney's office, one on April 12, and note this especially, it was only until District Attorney French had found out that Coleman was down there to see Keliher. The government sleuths were summoned to find Coleman riding down there in an auto to Keliher's. What happened. The District Attorney sent for Coleman. This was after the third trip. Where you down to Keliher's house that night? 'Yes.' 'What were you there for?'

Keliher Offer Allegation.

Coleman didn't know that he had been stenographically reported when he said to Mr. French, 'Keliher offered me $100,000 if I would have nothing more to do with the Bones gang and I will come down here to have him make me this offer.' And now I will tell it all to you. The first time I met Keliher again. If Keliher had offered you $100,000, do you think you'd refuse it? Has the record shown that he's been getting any money yet by which he could get his hands on it?

"I wish this jury were made up of honest employees of banks, and I'd have no doubt whatever of the outcome of this case. You know Coleman is protecting somebody. You know he is lying, he is protecting somebody.

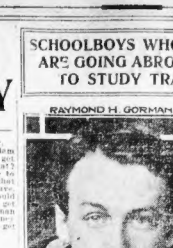
"You've seen pencil leads balances counted. You've seen balances carried along for the months and months. Only one of 31 months' and months' balances. Do you suppose that Coleman was the only one in the bank that carried off these balances in lead pencils?

"French wanted somebody else suspects, hence what about everybody else besides Coleman was implicated in the wreck of the bank. This somebody else if ever discovered will be found to be someone in authority and someone in authority at the bank.

"The Messengers Knew."

Gallerath and Colvert, two 844-week clerks in his pocket and they knew that he was stealing money from the bank. Where was President Dresser? Where was Barnicle? Where were the other directors? The week boys knew, but the directors didn't know.

SCHOOLBOYS WHO ARE GOING ABROAD TO STUDY TRADE



RAYMOND H. GORMAN

ISAAC SIMONS

BOYS TO STUDY TRADE ABROAD

As type of the fine class of boys that Boston is annually sending forth from its public schools, Raymond H. Gorman of No. 10 Lafayette park, and Isaac E. Simons of No. 56 Devon street, Roxbury, today started on a three months' trip abroad to study foreign trade.

The two boys are the winners of the travelling scholarships of the High School of Commerce. They sailed from Hoboken, N. J., at 10 o'clock, on the steamship Pennsylvania, of the Hamburg-American line.

Through them, the foreigners with whom they come in contact will be given a chance of seeing real up-to-date American boys, and of gauging the value of American schooling.

The boys will arrive in Hamburg about June 25. During July they will remain there, studying at the Kolonial institut, which is designed to train young Germans for service in foreign lands. They will enjoy the same privileges as native Germans.

The class in which they will be is scheduled to make an industrial excursion through Belgium and the Netherlands, where a special study will be made of the textile and iron industries. The famous Krupp works in Essen will be visited.

Late in August, the boys will tour most of the important European cities. Early in September they will spend a couple of weeks in England. They will sail for home September 15, from Liverpool, going to Canada, to Quebec, and thence home. Each gentleman who goes will receive about $1000 for his travels.

CRANBERRY GROWERS WANT NEW MARKETS

WAREHAM, June 15.—At a meeting of the Cape Cod Cranberry Growers' Association there the matter of advertising the cranberry so as to get a better market was discussed. It is planned to advertise the cranberry in new markets, the growers in the association to be taxed a certain amount for each barrel marketed. The tax idea does not arouse enthusiasm among the growers in this section. They will go in line for any mutual scheme for furthering the sale of the berries, but the tax scheme they shun.

GUNSAULUS ATTACKS ELIOT'S "LIBRARY"

CHICAGO, Ill., June 15.—Harvard Classics, embracing the "five-foot shelf" of books selected by President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot of Harvard University, were dealt an indirect blow by the Rev. Frank W. Gunsaulus, president of the Armour Institute of Technology, in the convocation address he delivered at the University of Chicago. Dr. Gunsaulus's selection of the best literary books did not include Shakespeare's works or the Bible, because everybody had read them. Dr. Gunsaulus attacked this omission. "How shabby would be the same with Abraham Lincoln," he declared, "if know that if he had read and studied what other men books he thought should be placed in the Five Foot Shelf of Books instead of the one Shakespeare, the Bible, a life of Washington, Pilgrim's Progress and the Constitution of the United States."

LAST OF THE LOW RATES

The Crowds Calling at the Offices of the Osmo-Chemic Physicians Necessitates an Increase in Their Fee. In Order to Limit the Number of Patients, They Will Be Compelled to Raise Their Fees. The Great Physicians Will Treat All Persons Applying on or Before June 30th at the Same Low Rates That They Have Charged in the Past. It Is Important to Call at Once if You Wish to Get the Benefit of the Present Low Rates.

It has been the desire of the Osmo-Chemic Physicians that every one should have an opportunity to place themselves under the Osmo-Chemic Treatment and be cured at a nominal price. The ever increasing throngs of patients seeking their services has necessitated their enlarging their offices from time to time. But the limit has been reached. Even though their offices were three times their present capacity, it would be impossible for the Osmo-Chemic Physicians to attend to the crowds seeking their services much longer. It will be necessary to raise the fees in order to limit the number of patients.

The Osmo-Chemic Physicians would like to continue the present low fees indefinitely if it were possible, but the tax on their strength has been so great during the past few months that it will be necessary for them to do something to limit the number of patients. However, as they are extremely anxious to bring happiness and health into homes where there is despondency and gloom, they will agree to treat all persons applying on or before June 30th on the following terms:

All persons applying before June 30th at the offices of the Osmo-Chemic Physicians will be treated at the same low rate which they have charged in the past. Understand, it is important to call at once, as the enormous crowds of patients seeking the Osmo-Chemic treatment necessitates it being discontinued after June 30th, and you will be treated at the same low fee which has been charged patients in the past. This is your last chance to be cured at a nominal price.

OSMO-CHEMIC TREATMENT FOR DEAFNESS.

In the treating of thousands of cases of catarrh the Osmo-Chemic Physicians noticed that many of their patients complained of deafness, caused with head noises of different kinds. On investigation they found that many of these were caused by head noises, discharging ears and ordinary deafness. In the majority of these cases the cause of the trouble was the accumulation of catarrhal secretions through the Eustachian tube into the middle ear. In the same way the ear becomes deafened by the hearing affected from the extension of sore throat from scarlet fever, diphtheria, measles and typhoid fever, and this condition is so distinctly curable by the Osmo-Chemic method of treatment that in fact, under the Osmo-Chemic treatment, all conditions of deafness, except those where the drum of the ear is totally destroyed, are curable.

Age and duration of disease is no deterrent to a cure, as cases where the patient had passed seventy years, and where the deafness had lasted for more than fifty years, have been cured.

The Osmo-Chemic Catarrh treatment, supplemented by the Osmo-Chemic Electric Vibrator, which gives a gentle massage to the ear drums, overcomes the dullness of hearing, the head noises, the discharging ears and the deafness. No matter how much you have been deaf, no matter how many physicians have told you that your hearing could not be restored by the Osmo-Chemic Catarrh Treatment will restore your hearing. The Osmo-Chemic Electric Vibrator has restored the sense of sound to thousands of ears after doctors had pronounced the cases absolutely hopeless. Not only restored the sense of sound, but has rendered the hearing as acute as before disease had attacked the ears.

JUDGE LINDSAY COMES OUT FOR INSURGENTS

EMPORIA, Kas., June 15.—Judge Ben B. Lindsay of the Denver Juvenile Court, independent Democrat and famous as a fighter of corrupt politics, has announced his support of the Insurgent Republican movement. In a letter to William Allen White, he asserts that the principal struggle to-day is between human rights and property rights and that the great business interests are using both of the regular party organizations for their own ends.

The only hope of either of the parties is the Judge's opinion is the election of the Republican organization by the insurgents.

"When it comes to be dominated in the West," he says, "it is not only doomed to defeat, but in my judgment to extinction, and upon its remains will arise a new party which will respond to the aspirations, hopes and purposes of the insurgents in both the old parties."

Judge Lindsay's letter was written to invite Mr. White to speak at a dinner in Colorado Springs to be given by the Insurgent representatives of Colorado. At this dinner the judge will announce his own position, he writes.

"I consider it my highest duty to lend any strength I may have to re-election of Insurgent Republicans like Beveridge, La Follette, Stubbs and Dolliver."

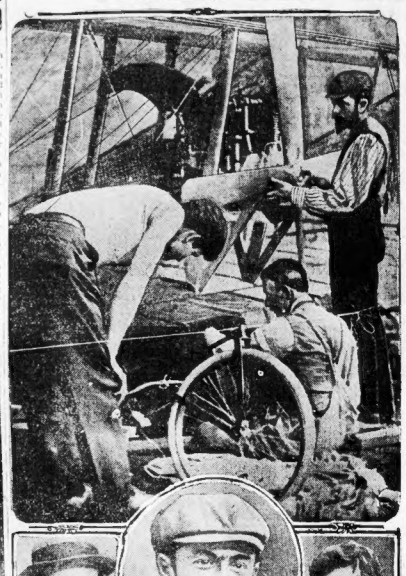
HARVARD AEROPLANE BREAKS DOWN ON ITS SOLDIERS FIELD TEST



A. W. CARPENTER J. V. MARTIN R. M. SALESKI

The three Harvard aviators and their biplane.

Harvard students and all Boston and Cambridge people interested in aerial navigation are to-day eagerly looking forward to the real first trial of "Harvard No. 1," the biplane of the Harvard Aeronautical Society, which is to take place to-morrow morning.

"Harvard No. 1," was to have had its first real try-out to-day, but in a preliminary trial on Soldiers' Field the brakes on the machine refused to work properly, and it careened and suddenly dived headon into the dump. To-day the damage is being repaired, the brakes adjusted, and the trial flight is to be made to-morrow.

Manager J. V. Martin was at the helm when the secret trial was attempted. The machine made a good start, but before it rose from the ground it was seen that something was wrong. It drove straight for the marshy dump and could not be stopped before the damage was done.

To-day a large number of students and spectators were disappointed when it was announced that the flight had been postponed until to-morrow.

When the machine started it ran across the ground rapidly straight toward the dump. As the brakes refused to act Manager Martin could not check it further than to stop the propeller. It veered as it struck the deep muck of the marsh and careened sharply. Martin clung to his seat and was unhurt. Both of the front wheels were torn from the skid and the attachment wrenched apart. One skid was badly twisted and turned, while the other was bent upward. Martin could easily have averted the accident had the brakes worked.

The members of the Aeronautical Society, headed by Manager Martin and Constanders, the inventor of the Harvard biplane, were soon at work upon the necessary repairs. The huge machine was wheeled back to the big tent in the lacrosse field where the damaged parts were removed and new parts either made or sent for.

FAT JURYMAN FILLS TWO CHAIRS

PITTSBURG, Pa., June 15.—N. J. Huffman, thirty years old, a juror sitting in the present term of criminal court, is having a most uncomfortable session. Huffman weighs 425 pounds and has great difficulty stowing away his bulk in the jury box. The chairs are too small for him, so he has to sit on the edge of two placed side by side.

In passing in and out of the jury box the gateway is so small for him that he can just squeeze through.

Huffman takes the situation with good nature and causes even the judge to smile at his struggles to and from the jury box.

LESSON IN CHEERFULNESS—How to keep from being discouraged. The most wonderful example in the world will be given in the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

SIX THOUSAND APPLAUD ACTS AT AIRDOME

Six thousand people witnessed the opening last night at Boston's new outdoor Summer amusement park, the Airdome, at the American League Grounds. It is a distinct departure from anything seen in this city. The entertainment consisted of twelve high-class acts of a nature somewhat similar to a circus.

For the novel performance a large stage was erected in the infield of the American League Grounds, directly in front of the grandstand, in front of which a circular ring was spread.

The grounds were brilliantly lighted and presented a beautiful spectacle. The cool breezes that swept over the park added to the comforts and enjoyment of the spectators. The enthusiastic applause that greeted each act attested to the success of the entertainment.

Amusing and Thrilling.

The acts are all splendid and high class. The work of Rice, Bully and Scott stood out prominently. They gave an exhibition of horizontal bar work that was at once side-splitting and thrilling.

The Airdome girls, a quartet of pretty unidentified dancers, with an entirely new dancing specialty, was another act well received. Their long rope dancing and posing was clever and original.

Maxine Elliott's wire-walker, scored a hit. He gave an exhibition of slack-wire work that was high class. His performance on the slack-wire was extremely ludicrous.

Marriott Twins and company, a troupe of jugglers, gave an act very much out of the ordinary and caught the fancy of the spectators. Their specialty was juggling large bulky articles. Another act that was well received was that of the Gerre and Bonhair troupe, who gave a clever exhibition of "trilby" work. Building lofty pyramids with ridiculous ease and tumbling about in bewildering fashion, the work of this clever troupe was greeted with round after round of applause.

Clever Aerial Act.

The high quality of the entertainment and the low price of admission promise a big success for the Airdome.

Other acts on the program were the lady and the clown; the De Dio circus, a troupe of trained monkeys, dogs and ponies; Mrs. Thompson, renowned woman whip; Ben Harper and brother, comedy cyclists; Thompson's high school horses; the Flying Bolsens, in a clever aerial act, and Fred and Alfred Frabolo, Spanish clowns. Robert R. Whittaker-Wilbert was director of the stage and scenes.

Oddities

Cocktail Inventor Arrives.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Broadway and the Bowery last night welcomed Harry Johnson, who was game forty years ago by introducing New York to the cocktail and the mint julep. He is here from Berlin to visit relatives and friends, and it is with considerable pride that he recalls the days when he mixed drinks for Jay Gould, Horace Greeley and "Boss" Tweed. As proprietor of the Little Jumbo saloon, at Grand street and the Bowery, he became a well known character of that period.

She Had to Swear! Said "Damn."

NEW YORK, June 15.—Mrs. Johanna Spitzer of No. 910 Columbus avenue and her husband were going north in an Eighth avenue car, when William Delilly, colored, stepped on Mrs. Spitzer's toes. He was arrested. "Do I have to swear, Judge?" she asked Magistrate Kroiel. "Yes," you must." "Well, damn."

Steel Trust Wants Cats.

CHICAGO, June 15.—The United States Steel Corporation at Gary wants fifty cats and will pay 50 cents apiece for them. For many months the company has been pestered by rodents and mice and traps have been tried without success. The final blow came when several rats got tangled up in one of the great dynamos.

Bitten by Snake, Just Prays.

CHICAGO, June 15.—Death caused by a rattlesnake bite ended nearly a week of torture endured by Oliver Pugh, formerly an alderman in Zion City, Ill. Pugh was bitten Wednesday, but, true to the teachings of his creed, refused to take medicine, relying upon prayers.

JAPAN MAKES DEMAND FOR ANOTHER TREATY WITH THE UNITED STATES

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Japan on Friday will serve notice that it desires next year the termination of the present treaty between that country and the United States. Under the terms of the treaty one year's notice must be given by either party to it. The decision of the Diet to increase its tariff on imported goods is the motive for the change. The Japanese are hard pressed for funds, on account of the Russian war obligations and the expansion of their navy, and the money can be raised in no other way.

At the time Japan renounces her present treaty, which has been in force ten years, she will ask for a new treaty to become effective on June 17, 1911. The important and rather delicate task of conducting the American side of the negotiations will fall to the lot of T. J. O'Brien, the American Ambassador at Tokio. Mr. O'Brien's fitness for this work has been tested. It is expected that most of the twelve months intervening between June 17, this year, and the same date next year, will be taken up in a discussion of the treaty.

The two points to which the makers of the new treaty will be required to give the most careful attention are:

First, the question of immigration.

Second, the question of tariff.

Consul-General Midzuno, of New York, in discussing the forthcoming treaty, said that Japan would exact the same privileges in other countries in future treaties that other countries now enjoy in Japan.

"It is no secret," said the consul-general, "that Japan intends to renounce her present treaties with the United States and with Great Britain and European nations. The treaty with the United States was made ten years ago and under it either party could renounce it by giving twelve months' notice. The time will expire in a few days and then Japan will give notice by an official announcement through the ambassador in Washington.

"For thirty years after Japan opened her ports to foreign trade she had very unequal treaties with the foreign Powers. They exerted extra-territorial rights by which, while a Japanese could be punished under the laws of a foreign country where he happened to be with the commission of new treaties, and of course Japan will try to get equality.

"Will the question of giving the Japanese the same rights of entry into this country that Americans have in Japan, be one, especially in the matter of the tariff. Foreigners importing goods into Japan have an advantage over the Japanese exporters.

Seek Only Equality.

"What Japan wants now is a treaty with the United States, and also with other countries, which will give her the same rights that she gives to citizens of other countries. For a year after notice of the renouncing of the treaty is given, it will still be in effect, but during that time Japan and the other nations will be negotiating with the view of making

SOCIETY FOLK SEE RACES AT COUNTRY CLUB

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

It was in a gay, gind mood that society donned its handsomest in gowns and hats to-day and motored out to the Country Club to attend the long anticipated Country Club races. These events have been notable in other years for their brilliancy and the many smart affairs incident to the occasion, but this year's meet promises to surpass them all.

All the handsomest of the Spring finery has been laid aside for this special occasion and the boxes on the grand stand blossomed forth with dainty toilettes like a veritable flower garden.

The clubhouse was the mecca for the smart ones and any number of parties were entertained there at luncheon as well as at afternoon tea on the lawn.

The Larz Andersons have this year taken two boxes on the grand stand will be filled with the house guests which they are entertaining at "Weld" their beautiful country place in Brookline.

A. H. Higginson who replaces Colonel Charles Hayden, resigned, as chairman of the stewards, also has a box on the grand stand in which his dainty little bride will entertain the family and friends.

The Bryce Allans, the F. Lothrop ames, the Hollis Hunnewells, and Helen Hooper, the pretty little debutante heiress just back from Europe and others have taken boxes.

Colonel Hayden came over from New York and brought a large party of friends with him. Philadelphia was represented by the A. J. Antelo Devereuxs of the Rednor Hunt coterie. Mrs. Devereux who was before her marriage Frances Fell, was a conspicuous figure at the races two years ago, when she attended with her cousin, Mrs. Charles Munn (Mary Astor Paul).

Miss Eleanore Sears has a box in her own name and there is little doubt but that it will be filled with a jolly party of her young friends who are all as enthusiastic over racing as she.

Other box holders are the Robert G. Shaws, Dr. Charles Weld, Seth Sprague of the Brook Club, New York; the Chester Whitin Lasells, the F. Lothrop Ameses and the John E. Thayers.

Parking spaces have been taken by the Bryce Allans, John S. Ames, Hamilton Perkins, William D. Mandell, Charles E. Cotting, A. S. Bigelow, John L. Hall, Colonel Robert Stevenson, Richard M. Saltonstall, W. L. McKee, H. G. Allen, Richard G. Tower, Dr. William Appleton, Charles W. Hubbard, George P. Gardner, C. F. Cutter, H. L. Burrage, William Lee Paine, Albertus Loring, Grant Walker, Samuel Carr, William J. Wright, Samuel Frothingham, S. Reed Anthony, William H. Paton of New York, Rodolphe Agassiz, Alexander Little, G. L. Brown, Addison Aldrich and H. B. Endicott.

Tables have been reserved at the club house by Harry W. Smith of Worcester, M. J. H. of the Loudon Hunt, who will entertain a party of six, Thomas Hitchcock of New York who will entertain several guests. Dr. Fritz B. Talbot, Dr. Harold W. Baker, a brother of Roy Baker, one of the stewards of the Country Club, who will entertain a party of eight on both days; B. G. Fuller who has a party of seven guests; Mr. and Mrs. Davenport Brown who will entertain a party of four at luncheon on both days; Mr. and Mrs. William D. Mandell who will have six guests on both days; Mrs. A. Forbes Conant, who will entertain ten at luncheon to-day and Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Porter, Jr., who will entertain twelve to-day.

Among those who will entertain on Friday are Mr. and Mrs. George T. Rice, who will have ten guests; J. H. Cotton of Longwood, who will also have ten guests; Beth Sprague, who will have eight at luncheon; Cyrus Sargent, who will entertain four; Mr. and Mrs. I. Tucker Burr, who will entertain eight guests; Mr. and Mrs. Francis L. Amory, who will entertain a party of ten; Mrs. Benjamin L. Young, who will have eight guests and William J. Wright, who will entertain a party of six.

FAMILIES FLEE SMOKY DEATH IN TENEMENT

Several families, routed from their beds by policemen and citizens, fled panic-stricken down smoke-filled stairways to the street during a fire in the four-story brick dwelling at No. 2505 North street early to-day. Many of them were slightly overcome by the smoke and had to be assisted from the burning building.

Two alarms were sounded for the blaze through the inadvertent action of an excited citizen and Chief Mullen's automobile narrowly escaped a collision with Engine 6 while he was reporting to the second alarm.

The fire started in the grocery store of Samuel Golden on the first floor of the building. Policeman Wilson was walking through North street when he saw smoke curling through the cracks in the door of the grocery store. Glancing through the window he saw flames curling up the walls in the rear of the store.

Wilson sounded an alarm and returned to the burning building. Several other persons ran up the stairs, and by pounding on the doors of the various tenements succeeded in rousing all the occupants. Dense volumes of smoke rolling up through the building from the lower floor almost blinded the people hurrying from the building. Many found difficulty in breathing and were weak from the effects of the smoke. These were assisted out of the building by Patrolman Wilson, who ran up through the house to make sure that every one had got out safely.

When the firemen arrived the blaze had gained considerable headway and was rapidly eating its way into the floor above. A slight hot air explosion blew out one of the windows of the store and warned the firemen to be careful. They finally obtained a footing in the interior of the store and with two lines of hose succeeded in confining the fire to the first floor.

BALDWIN HAS SHADE ON FRANKLIN BURNS

NEWARK, N. J., June 15.—In the star bout at the Pavilion, Frank Burns of California and Matty Baldwin of Boston fought it out for six rounds and Baldwin the last round had a shade the best of the bout.

The first round was a stand-off, Baldwin got away with the second and fifth, while Burns did his best punishing in the third and fourth. For the most part of the sixth the two boys mixed it up in good style. Baldwin was the aggressor throughout.

GOODALE IS EASY VICTIM FOR PAPKE

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 15.—With a right uppercut to the chin Billy Papke, ex-champion middleweight, knocked out Al Goodale of Chicago, after one minute and forty-two seconds of fighting in the second round of a scheduled ten-round bout. Papke stalled through the first round and then sent it right to the chin at the beginning of the second. Goodale took the count of nine, and after a minute more of sparring Papke sent him out. Goodale never had a glove on the thunderbolt.

BRITT MAKES MONTE ATTELL TRAVEL FAST

BALTIMORE, June 15.—Monte Attell went up against a tarter in Young Britt before the Eureka A. C. Attell was awarded the decision on points, but he was compelled to extend himself at all stages of the game.

Attell outpointed Britt, but his punches were woefully lacking in steam and did little or no damage. The Western lad was the aggressor a greater part of the time, but Britt fought him back hard all the way.

JEFF TO BOX EVERY DAY TO WHIP HIMSELF INTO FIGHTING CONDITION

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 15.—With the great Jeffries-Johnson battle only twenty days away, unless something unforseen occurs between now and the Fourth of July, it really begins to look as if Jeff had at last decided to hearken to the combined voices of his trainers and confederates and get down to boxing.

His nine continuous rounds of hard and fast sparring with Armstrong, Choynski and Berger was a revelation, not only to every one connected with the Jeffries camp, but apparently to the big fellow himself. Although this mammal sparring fest was prefaced by the announcement that Jeff will box constantly and faithfully every day for at least ten days or two weeks, the big fellow woke up this morning in a changed mood and with another new idea.

While every one in the camp woke up to an expectation of another festival of hard sparring, Jeffries calmly announced that he would do no work with the gloves to-day, and to the chagrin of his trainers, he adhered to that resolution. It was given out however, that to-day's lapse from the program started in with such a zip yesterday, did not mean that the big fellow's determination to do more boxing in the next two weeks had been shaken.

Never Felt Any Better.

The first announcement Jeff made to the camp this morning was that he never felt better in his life. Certainly his appearance and manner bore out the truth of his statement. The gnawing doubt of the period during which the big fellow worried and wondered whether he could really "come back" has gone completely, both from Jeffries and all his associates.

There is no longer the slightest doubt that Jeff has "come back," and that not only he has "come back," but that he is now stronger and in better condition than he was ever before.

According to trainer Cornell there is only one fear sprouting in the back of Jeffries' brain just now. That is the fear that some little thing will come unexpectedly to affect his present almost perfect condition. According to his own statements, it is that feeling that is governing his work from day to day.

Nothing that has happened since the opening of the camp at Rowardennan has given more comfort and encouragement to Jeffries' trainers than the thorough and conscientious style in which he slammed big Sol Armstrong, Sam Berger and Joe Choynski around the ring.

This spell of boxing came unexpectedly and was witnessed only by a few of the earliest risers of the camp. Six three-minute rounds Jeff went without the regular minute interval between, taking on Berger and Choynski alternately and keeping each of them so busy that they were glad when it was over.

Jeff in Fast Glove Play.

Corbett claims credit for this system of continuous fighting. He has succeeded in persuading the big fellow that what he needs most now is a lot of the hardest kind of boxing and that one of the best things for him to do is to take on sparring partners one after another, so he would always have a fresh man in front of him to keep him going at his fastest pace.

Watching Jeff go over this stunt made those who saw it realize the apparent impossibility of putting the big fellow to sleep or even of hurting him. Blows seem to rain off his face like water and he came out of this hardest fighting spell in his training to date, breathing almost as easily as at the beginning.

Yes, Jeffries is almost his first active interest in the program of Johnson's training to-day, when Dick Adams returned from above after having taken a look at the big fighter in his training quarters. Jeff had noticed in the papers accounts of Adams' many conversational chats with Johnson. After he had greeted his old pal to-day he inquired: "How did Johnson look? Does he appear to be in good condition?"

"Yes, I was surprised," answered Dick, "to find him in such good shape. These stories about his being fat and undertrained are wrong according to my judgment. Johnson is big and powerful and will be in wonderful condition for the fight."

"All right, I'm glad to hear it," was Jeff's terse reply.

A feeling of complete optimism is now rife in Jeff camp, and it was scarcely stronger than that displayed at the Seal Rock House where Johnson is playing with his ninety housepower buzz wagon and incidentally doing some pretty stiff work in preparation for the fight. Although yesterday the hardest work Johnson did was to whirl the steering gear of his racer in an all day trip to San Jose and back, to-day he made amends for this by putting big Al Kaufman through for the bottles bout the fans at the Seal Rock have seen since Johnson took up his residence there.

Johnson begged, for both their sakes, to go at him as hard as the law allowed, and Kaufman certainly did. It was a warm and lively little bout during every minute of the four rounds and besides the pounding Johnson's wonderful skill as a boxer, it showed that Kaufman was in fine shape for his twenty round engagement with Sam Langford next Saturday.

Besides boxing with Kaufman Johnson took on Cotton, Mills and a couple of other heavy camp hangerson and made them so hot that they were glad to get out in the cold wind that swept along the beach all day.

According to Tom Flanagan, Johnson will continue his road work to within a week of the fight.

It was learned to-day that Marty Cutler, one of Jack's sparring partners, and left camp without warning. Ever since Cutler was knocked out by Johnson as a matter of discipline he has nursed a grudge, and his departure was no surprise to the camp.

FITZGERALD CONFIRMED FOR SINKING FUND

William F. Fitzgerald was to-day approved by the Civil Service Commission as a sinking fund commissioner for the city of Boston.

The thirty days with the Commission had to consider the appointment expired to-night at midnight.

The new commissioner is a member of the banking firm of Fitzgerald, Hubbard & Co., and is well known in financial circles. He takes the place of H. Rhodes on the commission.

There was no notice given to the city clerk as to whether favorable action had been taken on the appointment of James McLaughlin as fish trustee. His thirty-day confirmation period expires to-morrow and unless a special meeting of the Commission is held before the next regular meeting of the Commission it is taken to indicate that he has been rejected.

JOHNSON TAKES $50,000 FOR FIGHT FILM RIGHTS

By C. E. VAN LOAN.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 13.—Tex Rickard breathes again.

To-day Jack Johnson backed his big six-cylinder racing car into a downtown garage, bumped its homely gray tail against the wall and dismounted sorrowfully.

"Praise be, there's one thing off my mind," said Rickard, who was an interested spectator. "That car stays here until after the Fourth."

Johnson has forsworn fast driving until after the big fight.

The other interesting news item of the day is that Johnson has virtually accepted an offer of $50,000 for his one-third interest in the moving pictures of the contest. A syndicate composed of moving picture people, who are willing to gamble to the extent of offering $150,000 in a lump sum for the films of the Fourth of July affair, to-day persuaded Johnson that $50,000 in the hand was better than a gamble on twice that much.

Rickard had two matters on his hands to-day. The first was the housing of Johnson's car, which has been worrying Tex a great deal of late since he found out that Johnson had been in the habit of straining the spring in his speedometer.

The champion declares that his car can do seventy miles an hour on the road, and Tex with some money tied up and all his prospects at hazard, insisted that Johnson give his word that he would let the big six cylinder alone until the evening of the Fourth.

Accepts $50,000 Offer.

The second matter was a meeting with the men representing the moving picture syndicate. Two of these men, Messrs. Beck and Clune, went with Rickard to the garage and watched Johnson put the roadster in cold storage. Then they took the big negro aside and talked money to him. Johnson was plainly interested. He listened carefully and at times interposed objections and suggestions.

Part of the time Rickard was a member of the conference. At last the quartet drove downtown to an attorney's office where the papers were drawn up. Johnson admitted that he had "about made up his mind" to accept the offer of $50,000 for his end.

"It's this way" said Johnson. "you can't tell what people are going to do to you when these pictures go out on the road. They have to be on the level with you and give you what is coming, or they may say, 'you lose.' If I get the money beforehand, some one else will have to do the worrying."

Tex strenuously insists that the moving picture men have not endeavored to secure any promise as to the length of the fight.

"If these men bug us out," said Rickard, "they will have to gamble on the fight going one round or going twenty rounds. That is what we expected to do, and I know that no man could go to either Johnson or Jeffries with any proposition to put up a show for a few rounds for the sake of the films. Johnson will win in the first round if he can, and Jeff feels just the same way about it."

Offer Up to Jeff.

The fact that Rickard is seriously considering the offer of a lump sum of $50,000 for the rights in the pictures throws an interesting shaft of white light on the main arguments as to the value of the films in case the fight is a good one. The sum named falls far short of the smallest sum calculated by the enthusiasts, who have been appraising the films as worth anywhere from a quarter to a half a million of dollars.

Jack Gleason was surprised when he was told that Johnson was considering an offer of $50,000 for his third. "I haven't heard anything about such a deal," said Jack. "Nobody seems to know what Jeff is going to do about the proposition. Whether Johnson's decision will have any weight with the white man is entirely problematical. Of course, it will partly depend upon Jeffries' decision. It is known that he would like to be relieved of all the worry and attention which must be given to a few dozen picture shows on the road, and the $50,000 may tempt him just as it has tempted Johnson.

Johnson went at his work to-day as if divided from all care. It is true that his face drew when he heard the familiar ring of the motors out on the roadway, and once while he was dressing for the work out he ran to the window to watch for a fast car which lay on the level boulevard in front of his training quarters.

"My, my," lamented the champion, looking after the cloud of dust. "And my car in the garage. Makes a fellow feel like an orphan."

WRAY SELECTS HARVARD EIGHT

HARVARD TRAINING QUARTERS, Red Top, Conn., June 13.—Coach Jim Wray of the Harvard crew to-day said that although he was extremely anxious to begin long, hard rows for his varsity eight, he would order none till Eliot Bacon has regained his strength.

Bacon returned to the crew and occupied his old seat at No. 7 last night. He has not yet become physically fit after his recent illness, and the work of the Harvard eight was in consequence short and easy.

Wray gave orders to-day to lengthen the rowing at both the morning and the evening practice, but no other work is expected.

The make up of the varsity eight is regarded as settled. The varsity four is not yet finally organized, and the freshmen eight is still uncertain.

George Meyer, son of the Secretary of the Navy, is the only member of the crew who was given a trial last night who has made good. He was placed at bow, and is almost certain to remain there.

The St. Louis Cardinals will open here this afternoon at the South End Grounds with the Doves in the first of a five-game series. Bresnahan's men are at present leading the second division and have been climbing in fine shape lately, but Fred Lake does not expect to see them climb while in Boston.

All the Dove players are sore over the defeat handed them yesterday and promise to hit the ball in this series and show the fans that it is about time for them to climb. Curtis, the Dove's star pitcher, will likely be on the mound against Higgins or Beckman.

The Red Sox open a hard series with the Detroit Tigers this afternoon. After that long fourteen-inning struggle with the Naps yesterday and the train ride just evening the Red Sox players are a pretty tired bunch. The Tigers have just cleaned up with the New York Yanks and are ready to do the same with the Boston bunch.

JACK TELLS TAD HOW HE WILL FIGHT BIG BATTLE

By TAD.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 13.—Jack Johnson was all smiles when he worked out in a four-round go with Al Kaufman just for the benefit of the Eastern newspapermen who came out to see him.

The big fellow was all dressed up in his Sunday best, lounging about on the sand when two big buzz wagons drove up and out came a bunch of Eastern scribes. Johnson had intended to lay off but smilingly removed his scenery and went four very sweet little rounds with Kaufman. Up in the ruboown room after his workout Johnson still smiled and kidded and just to show the bunch that he could peg his weight on the scales, set the mark at 212 and then made it balance.

"I could drop to 205 by to-morrow if I wanted to," said the big colored champion, "but I'm just packing on all the meat I can these days and I feel that I'll be able to use it."

Mr. Jeffries will weigh about 225 or 230 when he gets into the ring next month, and I don't want to think that he will be able to push and haul me around. Do you notice me hauling my sparring partners around every day. I want them to push me all over the ring, if they can, and I have told them to take every little advantage."

Maps Out Fight Program.

"I feel that this will be a fight at short range. I think that Jeff is going to keep right close to me all the time, figuring that his weight and strength will weaken me. I don't think that there's a man in the world who can shove me around the ring—and let that go for keeps, too.

"You know that Jeff has Burns up there showing him little tricks with the wrists and arms for the clinch, and Gotch will help him out, but I'm well heeled. I'd rather have him in close. My game is a close fight—I mean, that I like it. I'm sure I can fight at long range, too, but I really think that in close I'm the best man in the ring.

"I don't care what way Jeff intends to fight, but from the dope I figure it a scuffling battle, with him trying to wear me down, and I'm working for just the same sort of a thing myself. Yes, I think it will be a long fight.

"I know that I will be in no hurry at any stage of the game. I'll fight my best battle. I can't do it. I did from Tommy Burns. He just as sure and careful as I can, never take a chance with my hands once.

"No, I never do the rushing. What's the good? If you can beat a man by jabbing his nose, keep on jabbing his nose. If you can beat him by meeting him with right crosses, keep at it. There's no use trying any new stunts when you're winning easily with the ones you are working now.

"If I see that I can beat Jeff to the jab, I'll go right ahead with it and never change. If I can throw him around and beat him at fighting I'll do all my work that way. It will only take me about three rounds to size up the situation and after I once get my plan of battle made out there won't be any change. A fellow can't be too sure, nor too careful, on a big thing like this and I'll be the careful kid."

Tad's Crisp Comments.

Johnson had his hair cut early to-day and his ebony dome shone like the top of a mahogany table.

Billy Delaney will join the Johnson forces this afternoon. Bill is still at Harbin Springs.

Tim McGrath is the Western agent for a big Eastern brewery now. He says that when Tom Sharkey arrives he will douse him with ice water and then the new play here will be great.

"You may say Johnson is sure on me?" inquired Sam Langford to-day. "He wanted to manage me after he got back from Australia, but I couldn't see it. I met him in Wilkins's place one night and he said: 'Will you fight Ketchel if I match you for $5,000?' I said: 'Yes, Jack, if you'll meet the white boys.' 'Say, Buck, close up on a chink,' he said, and he never spoke to me since."

John Loftis thinks that Jeff will get away with the big fight but not until a good many rounds have passed. Johnson is working for a long bout and feels he the longer it goes the better for him. I think that Jeff will try and finish it inside of fifteen rounds and then come home breezy.

Bob Dealy likes Johnson. "I've watched him carefully," said Bob, "and there's not a man boxing to-day who will throw a glove on him unless he becomes reckless. Jeff will be missing him three feet, and after six or ten rounds will get so tired that the colored fellow will make the police jump in to stop the fight."

Fatty Hinds likes Jeff. He says: "I'd back Johnson against any man in the world except Jeff. This fellow Jeff is so big and strong and game that it's foolish to try and beat him. They call him the cave man in some of the papers, and I think it's a great title."

Billie McCarney says: "I'm betting that Jeff will win a knockdown in the second round. They have pools all over town here on that think and have two to one the winner will round he wins in and the round the first knockdown occurs. I pick Jeff to win in the eleventh."

Is Your Name Among Them?

Evelyn Thaw's Art

By NELL BRINKLEY

EVELYN THAW lives in a narrow, dark, old house on Thirty-third street, near Broadway, New York city. It huddles itself up away from the crowding, bright, tall buildings around. In the fashion of a shabby, aristocratic old maid hitching her black silk around her frail prettiness in a mob of effervescent, dazzling show girls.

It looks out pleasantly into the busy street from its window-eyes, over boxes of flowers and trailing sprays of green. It is dark inside, too, and its stairs go round and round as they go up and up. And I went UP and UP!

I had a very lively delight in seeing Evelyn Thaw again—for she is such a beautiful thing to look at that one ought to be enough to hold my interest tight and fast, without the adroit entertainment of the tongue that goes with it.

The last bit of stairs before the roof closed down on me was as black as tar. I groped with my hands, stepped on my instrument, stumbled with my toes, and with my eyes stretched wide felt as blind as a mole.

And then a block of pale light came out of the top of the blackness, and a furious toy barking came out of it, and, struggling to rise above it, a clear voice.

In the Studio Twilight

And then I came up into the twilight of her studio and into the tiny uproar of a little black ink spot of a dog's objections. And while it hurled itself in little dives against my skirts, entreated me with its paws, and lavished with a wide, pink smile, Mrs. Thaw spread her hands abroad and told me about the studio.

"I found out that you're got to have a story-boss studio to give your friends tea in and to look artistic in, and another to do honest work in."

The room was cleared out, bare, with a fine skylight letting down the clear, pallid, pure accusatory light on the concrete floor, and in the full centre of the pool stood the big, rough, wooden stand topped with a long-necked head of a woman worked out in the green tinted plasterine packed away between the legs of the stand were her tools. She pulled one out, a two legged measuring instrument and told me that it had gone through long service in the Beaux Arts in Paris.

Behind the unfinished head upon her stand was the model, an Irish Italian girl, with the face and head of a Greek.

Boxes, tables, a few good chairs, shelves loaded with the stuff of the trade and mounds of clay, white casts of hands and heads and a figure or two, a square mirror tipped in a corner holding a picture of a bit of the sunset sky above—that is Evelyn Thaw's "sculpting" den.

She is just as smooth and fresh and young looking as ever. Her eyes are as dark and unruffled, nearly as deep and brown, not a mar in all the perfection of her face, her mouth as richly colored, her cheeks dyed with a faint, hot, pink; her hair on her neck under the wings of the eternal black ribbon bow, very soft and brown and glossy and fine, done in its same plain fashion—two little scallops over her eyebrows—held at the crown with a comb, tied on her neck with a ribbon and lying between her shoulder blades in a big knot.

And speaking about shoulder blades, they're out after bowling through a frock in the back as any more like the spring goddess of crocus as they did. I she's not so fearfully thin now. She rolls up the sleeves of her apron and shows her fist. "Look at that," says she, "it gives you muscle to pull a clay lump." I've some great times." But it's spoiling hands. Flattening out lumps and bits of clay on bread. But it's good days, and I like to work.

"I'm happy I'm interested. I'm serious. I'm in earnest. At first I went to be somebody in a minute. I wante be a great sculptor in a night.

"You see I was really in earnest. Then I didn't want the practice part of it, the drudgery. I'm glad I didn't know that colorless, dogged energy underneath the finished result of beautiful and good work, just as structure of bone lies under the beautiful moulding of a splendid head. And I began to see the beauty of the digging part and to take a little joy in it.

"I'm not in such a hurry now. I've got to know things. And it's going to take time. And—and," and she laughed, low and full, relieved sort of way, for she was getting very much in earnest, and wading deep into her feelings, "and I am finding some how a good fellow!"

She is going to go to Paris—if my husband will let me. He can't just see it that way yet, but maybe he will.

"I want to stay six years—then," so her "then I'll be forty, and I ought to be knowing that I'm doing something in six years. I want to be able to keep myself with it. I want to be somebody through it myself. I want to be satisfied—and I want to know MYSELF that my work is good."

Some folks have called her rich and wished to make her their friend that Evelyn Thaw was worth looking in for art, as they put it. But each of her own words wouldn't make any mark on their opinion. So look at the half-rough head on the pedestal would anyhow make them think she had ought to be in earnest, for she has a big share of talent and deft, intelligent fingers.

Things She Talked About

She told the wax goddess of that same nose, how it started to be something to admire and worship and how it wandered off of the study of the path of the Greek line and wound up a hard-breed; she told about that the bright green parrot, the big plantaline and dirty about Ramee, the little silky black dog with the gems for eyes who flicked out a pink tongue at my hands, about how she tried to wear false hair and pile it up on top and gave it up for a loss try, and how a girl she knew won a million dollars worth of puffs and looked a dream in them; about the highway powwows she and Mildred, the pretty Irish-Italian girl, held on philosophy and anatomy, literature and art; about the day they spent in the dress of two dictionaries dressing up in a cartoon words, accident and almost decisive words that stirred in the air as they fit the absurdities and all without their knowing how she knew the words and the little people in them—nerves and aching s—knew she was a little girl; how she loves fairy tales—said how happy she is! And while she talked she pulled the head on the stand into shape.

NELL BRINKLEY

What's In a Name?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DO YOU like your own name, or are you possessed with the desire to be called by some name more high-sounding and romantic?

There is a great deal in the meaning of names, and some names suit their own era so perfectly, while others seem utterly inappropriate.

Just at present, there is a craze for all the overly old fashioned names, and the to by girls of to-day are most fortunate in escaping the high "pure, fo-dity names that some of their mothers and aunts suffered from.

What the Old Names Mean

Take Ann, for instance. It's a sweet name and its meaning is "grace." Its companion names such as Annette, Hannah, etc., have the same meaning. Amanda means "worthy to be loved."

Beatrice means "to make happy," while Bertha means "bright and beautiful," and Ethel means "strength."

Blanche means "white" and Barbara "strange."

Caroline and Charlotte are the feminine of Charles and mean "noble and strong."

Christine means "pure."

Constance means "firm, constant."

Doris, Dorothea, Dorothy, mean "the gift of God." That's a very beautiful meaning, isn't it?

Edith means "happiness," and Eleanor "light."

Emily means "energetic and industrious," and Elizabeth and Eliza "worshipper of God."

Florence, Flora, "blooming, flourishing."

Grace and Gertrude.

Grace carries its meaning in its name, and Gertrude means "Spear-maiden."

Helen means "light," and Hester "a star of good fortune."

Ida means "God like"; Irene "Peace."

Jane it love that dear old names means "The gracious gift of God." Jean and Jeannette have the same meaning, and Jemima means "A dove."

Lucy and Louise mean "Born at break of day," while Lily carries its own meaning.

Margaret means "A pearl," and Mary the loveliest name of all, means "Star of the sea."

Martha, "Ruler of the house"; Matilda "Mighty, heroic."

Maude means "Admirable" and Myra, "She who weeps."

Phyllis means "Noble" and Phoebe "Pure and radiant." Phyllis, "A lover of trees."

Rebecca means "Of enchanting beauty." Rose means itself, and Rhoda "A rose."

Sarah "Wisdom," Sophia, "A Princess" Susan, "A Lily" and Salome, "Peaceful."

Victoria, "Victory," Virginia, "Pure" and Vivian, "Lively."

Winifred means "A lover of peace."

Is Your Name Among Them?

That takes in a good many of the old fashioned names, and probably yours is among them.

Don't get into the habit of shortening your name or spelling it in some fidgety, new-fangled way.

Use both of your full name, write it out plainly.

Remember that young man

What Day Were You Born?

Here's a little rhyme to finish the symbol question

Monday's child is fair of face,
Tuesday's child is full of grace;

YOU'RE FIVE CENTS SHY THIS WEEK! WHAT DOES THIS MEAN!
I LOST MY SUBWAY TICKET.
HARD EARNED!
JEMINA MEANS "A DOVE"
FREDERICK MEANS "A WISE RULER."

As it sometimes happens, the names are very inappropriate.

Wednesday a child is loving and giving,
Thursday's child must work for its living
Friday a child is the child of woe,
Saturday's child has far to go
And he—the man who was born on the Sabbath day
Is bright and bonny and good and gay

Shadows

By RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES

THEY seem'd, to those who saw them meet,
The casual friends of every day;
Her smile was undisturb'd and sweet,
His courtesy was free and gay.

But yet if one the other's name
In some unguarded moment heard,
His heart grew brought no calm and tame,
Her struggle like a captured bird,

All letters of mere formal phrase
Were blister'd with repeated tears—
And this was not the work of days,
But had gone on for years and years!

Alas, that love was not too strong
For maiden shame and manly pride
Alas, that they delay'd so long
The goal of mutual bliss beside!

Yet what no chance could then reveal,
And neither would be first to own,
Let fate and courage now conceal,
When truth could bring remorse alone.

DAY'S BEST STORY

A FORLORN looking man was brought before a magistrate for drunkenness and disorderly conduct. When asked what he had to say for himself he gazed pensively at the judge, smoothed down a rent in his coat and said:

"Your Honor, I'm a monumentality to mess makes me indescribably mournful. I'm not as debased as Swift, as profligate as Byron, as dissipated as Poe or as debauched as—

"I say will cry," thundered the magistrate. "Thirty days!" And, officer, take a list of those names and run 'em in. They're as bad a lot as he is."

How a Business Failure Wins Success Through Love and Stick-to-itiveness

By JOSEPH LOUIS VANCE

"NO, you do it," Josie pleaded.

"Certainly." He lifted the whiskey glass and the jar and began to pour. "If you'll just say when."

"Wait! Oh, that's enough, thank you."

"If I ever get out of this fix, I'll blow the whole shooting match," he promised himself, holding the glass beneath the faucet and fiddling nervously with the valves. For a moment no fluid ran; he must be empty, for nothing came of his efforts.

Then abruptly the fixture seemed to explode. "A geyser!" he cried, blinded with the dash of carbonated water and syrup in his face, while he fumbled furiously with the valves.

As unexpectedly as it had begun the flow ceased. He got down the glass, found his handkerchief and mopped his dripping face. When able to see again he discovered the young women leaning against one of the show cases, weak with laughter, but at a safe remove.

"Our soda's so strong, you know," he apologized. "But if you'll stay where you are, I'll try again."

Warned by experience, he worked at the machine gingerly, finally producing a thin, sputtering trickle. Beaming with triumph, he looked up. "I think it is safe now," he suggested; "I urge he have it under control."

Angie and Josie returned, torn by distrust, but unable to resist the fascination of the stranger in our village. And there's no denying the boy was good-looking and a gentleman by birth; a being alien to the experience of most.

He had filled one glass and was thickening it with syrup when he caught again that confiding smile of Josie's, full upon him as the beam of the noonday sun.

"Haven't we seen you at church, Mr. Duncan?" she said prettily.

Church and the Choir

"I think, perhaps, you may have," he conceded. "I have seen you both." The second glass (for he was determined that Angie should not escape) took up all his attention for an instant. "I too love to go, to?" he inquired out of this deep preoccupation.

"What?"

"I mean, do you attend regularly?" he amended hastily.

"Oh, yes, of course," Josie simpered, accepting the glass he offered her. "You make it a rule to go every Sunday, don't you, Mr. Duncan?"

He permitted himself an indiscretion, secure in the belief it would pass unchallenged: "It's one of the rules, but I didn't make it."

"Did you know there was a vacancy in the choir?" Angie asked, taking up her glass.

"Choir?"

"Yes," Josie chimed in; "we were hoping you'd join. I want you to, awfully."

His Voice in Bad Shape

"We're both in the choir," Angie explained.

"And all the girls want you to join. Don't they, Angie?"

"Oh, yes, indeed; they're all just dying to meet you."

"I'll have to write and ask," he said abstractedly.

"Why, what do you mean by that?"

Josie's question struck him dumb with consternation. He made curious noises in his throat, and fancied he was quite possible that they eyed him in a peculiar fashion. "I—I mean—a little trouble with my throat," he managed to lie, at length. "I must ask my physician if it may, first."

"Oh, I see," said Josie.

"But," he hastened to change the subject, "you're not drinking, either of you. I sincerely hope it's not so very bad."

Angie replaced her glass, barely tasted. "Do you like it, Josie?"

To Josie's credit it must be admitted that she made a brave attempt to drink. But the mixture was undoubtedly flat, stale and unpalatable. She sighed, put it back on the counter and rose to the emergency.

"Mine's perfectly lovely," with a ravishing smile—"but it's not very sweet."

"I made them dry for you—thought you'd like 'em that way," he stammered. "Perhaps you'll like 'em better if I put a collar on 'em?"

The chorus negatived this suggestion very promptly.

"Why don't you try a glass, Mr. Duncan?" Angie added with malice.

"I'm on the wagon—I mean, I don't drink at all," he said wretchedly; and was deeply grateful for the diversion effected by the entrance of a third customer.

It was Tracey Tanner, as usual swollen with important tidings, as usual propelling himself through the world at a heavy trot. He has always been a source of wonderment to me how Tracey manages to keep so stout with all the violent exercise he takes.

"Say, Angie," he twanged at sight of her, "I've been lookin' for you everywhere. Did you hear that——"

He stopped instantaneously with open mouth as he saw Duncan behind the counter, and open mouthed he remained while the young man came round and advanced toward him with a bland smile.

He stood there, his face a picture of consternation, his mouth agape, his eyes staring, his hands hanging limply at his sides. Tracey, in the act of turning away, caught sight of him, and his jaw dropped.

"Why, Duncan!" he exclaimed.

"Duncan!" echoed Angie, with a little gasp.

"Duncan!" Josie repeated, with a little shriek.

Duncan bowed again, his face expressionless. "Then will you be good enough to excuse me?" He turned precisely and made his way back to the counter.

As if released from some spell of strong enchantment by the movement, Tracey swung on his heel and lunged for the door.

"What was it you wanted to ask me, Tracey?" Angie called after him.

As the fat boy disappeared, a loud-mouthed response floated back: "I forgit."

"I'm afraid I must have frightened him?" Duncan said inquiringly.

"Oh, no, not at all," Josie reassured him; "he's just gone to tell everybody you're here."

"Come, Josie, we've been here ever so long," Angie moved slowly toward the door, but Josie inclined to linger.

"Don't hurry, I beg of you," Duncan interposed.

"Oh, we haven't hurried," she said with a gush of gratification that was pathetic to behold. "You'll remember what I said about the choir, won't you?"

He braced himself to take advantage of the opening. "I shall never forget it," he said impressively.

She gave him her hand. "Then good-by."

"Not goodby, I trust?" He retained the hand, despising himself inexpressibly. "Oh, well! I'll call again, won't we Angie?"

"Oh, yes, indeed."

"My land, Angie! What do you think? I'd almost forgotten to pay for the soda?" "Please don't mention it," Miss Lockwood—the pleasure——

"But I insist, Mr. Duncan. How much is it?"

Josie fingered the contents of her purse expectantly, but Duncan hung in the wing. He had no least notion what might be the price of soda water. "Two for a quarter?" he hazarded with his customary stupidity.

Angie cooked with appreciation of this exquisite sally. "Ain't you funny?"

"I'm afraid you're a little conceited," still I'd rather you didn't think so."

"It's ten cents, Mr. Duncan?"

Josie was offering him a dime; he accepted it without question.

"Thank you, very much," said he. "Good afternoon, ladies."

He was aware of Angie's fluttering fart, wells on the sidewalk. Josie was lingering on the door step in an agony of untrained coquetry. He bowed once more, profoundly, thereby adding new weight to his bewilderment of her amateur defences.

"Remember, you promised to call again." Her giggles were like ear drums. "Thank you, I'm sure," she stammered out and fled.

They disappeared. He wandered to the chair and threw himself limply into it. "That voice!" he said stupidly. "That giggle! I've got to woo and win * * * that? * * *

"It serves me right," he concluded. The most hopeless of passions assailed him, and he yielded to it without a struggle. Her attitude expressed the mood with relentless verity. He sunken down on his breast, eyes fairly distilling gloom, legs stretched out carelessly before him, he sat motionless, suffocating at the bottom of a gulf of discouragement. He moved, sometimes, noiselessly, again in whispered, barely audible words.

"Years of this! * * * A matter of human endurance—— * * * If it wasn't for the bargain I'd chuck it all and * * *

"Well, the only way to forget your misery is to work, I suppose."

A New Shadow in His Path

He pulled himself together and stood up, wondering where he had left his broom, and simultaneously stiffened with surprise, a scare that he was not alone.

A glance, however, assured the connection between the rear door, which stood ajar, and the person of Graham's old stool staring at him in interest unspeculation. This, he thought, must be the woman of the voice up stairs.

But she couldn't be Graham's wife. She was too young. Even the slovenly effects of care and weariness, the all too plain evidences of privation, spiritual and mental as well as physical, that Betty wore unceasingly in those days, he could discern youth and grace and gentleness, and the present promise of prettiness that longed to be, to have the chance to show itself and claim its need of defences and love.

He was quick to see the intelligence in her multituous eyes, and the sweet lines of her mouth, and no less quick to recognize that she would easily meet, with spirit and dignity, once she were relieved of household toil and moil, once given the chance to discard her shapeless, bedraggled and threadbare garments for those dainty and beautiful things for which her starved heart must be sick with longing.

"Good Lord!" he thought, pitiful, "it's worse here than I dreamed. Old Graham must need a keeper—and this child has been trying to be that, with nothing to keep him on."

"Who are you?" the girl demanded sullenly, in a voice a little harsh and toneless. "What are you doing here? Where's my father?"

"Mr. Graham has stepped out on business," Duncan replied. "You are his daughter, I believe?"

"Yes, I'm his daughter, but——"

"My name is Nathaniel Duncan. Mr. Graham has been kind enough to take me on as apprentice, so to speak."

Her stare continued, intense, resentful, undeviating.

"You mean you're going to work here?"

"That's my intention, Miss Graham," He nodded gravely.

"What for?"

"To learn the drug business."

"Oh-h-h!" She flung herself a pace away, impatiently. "I'm not a child, and I don't want to be talked to like one."

"I didn't mean to annoy you——"

"Well, you do. You've got no business in a run-down place like this—you with your fine clothes and your fine airs. You didn't come here to learn the drug business; you know as well as I do you've got some other motive."

There was a truth in that to sting him. He smarted under its lash, but held his temper in check because of the pity for the girl.

TO BRING 40 WIVES HERE

ANNOUNCEMENT that His Majesty King Chulalongkorn of Siam is planning a visit to the United States already has caused much interested speculation because the King has forty wives, and he means to bring them along. Just whether he will be permitted to enter the United States with his harem is an interesting question. Various princes have entered the United States country with several of their wives, and at all times have been enforced to bring but one wife would be permitted in this country. The King, however, ever has ignored this, and under such circumstances, and unquestionably President Taft will have a delicate diplomatic task before him in deciding the question.

STUDY OF BELLS FAD

BELLS are the fad of Mrs. D. Henry Talbot, society woman, who lives on Astor avenue, Chicago, member of the Dames of the Loyal Legion. They have absorbed her entire time for many months and have caused her to travel all over the world. Mrs. Hammer owns musical instruments that have changed tragedies and clattered comedies have a sentimental, historical and a scientific appeal.

HELEN HOOPER, PRETTIEST OF SEASON'S BUDS

Quite the most attractive of all the prospective debutantes is that winsome bit of femininity, Helen Hooper, who has just returned from Europe and is settled for the Summer in her fine country home on the North Shore. Miss Hooper is to be presented next Winter, but is enjoying immensely her preliminary canter, which promises to be a long-speed one before the end of the Summer. The other buds are sighing and joking rather wistfully over their prospects, for to have even such a beauty as Miss Hooper to compete with is enough, but they have also in her the wealthiest young heiress in town, and that naturally means that the competition is fierce and the attainments will be as keen as the beauty race. But such a sweet, wholesome and altogether charming young girl is Miss Hooper that no doubt she will arrange things—her gowns, entertainments and all—to conform with those of her less fortunate sister buds.

SOUNDS CREDIBLE

A DOCTOR related the following story: "I had a patient who was very ill and who ought to have gone to a warmer climate, but whose means were insufficient, so I resolved to try what hypnotism would do for him. I had a large room painted on the ceiling of his room and by suggestion induced him to think it was the sun, which would cure him. The cure succeeded and as was getting better rapidly when one day on my arrival I found he was dead.

"Did it fail, after all, then?" asked the doctor's hearers.

"No," replied the doctor, "he died of sunstroke."

Girl Preacher to Students.

HELEN F. NOON, who recently was graduated from Simmons College of this city and afterward was secretary to the dean of the Illinois State University, really has become the pastor to the students of the university. She nominally has left the employ of the dean to be assistant pastor to the Rev. James C. Baker of Trinity Church, Urbana, Ill., where the State University is, but her work will be to look after the religious girls among the students. She will work among 2,000 girl students.

Poor Tenor's Sweet Voice Won Legacy of $25,000

NEW YORK, June 15.—It was his tenor voice, according to Edgar R. Accetta, the young singer, that won him a legacy of $25,000 in the will of Mrs. Fanny Surdam Stelle, who died suddenly in Chicago.

Some mystery was thrown around the death of Mrs. Stelle by the fact that Accetta had been arrested a few days before her death in connection with the murder of Filippo Catalano, a restaurant keeper of Chicago. Accetta was subsequently released, it having been proved that a stranger shot the man and that Accetta was only a witness.

"Catalano's death had nothing to do with the money left me by Mrs. Stelle," said Accetta to-day when seen in his office. "The police tried to make it appear that Catalano and the man who shot him plotted to assassinate me, thinking that I had a large sum of money with me, but I am sure that was not the case. Catalano was killed, I believe, because of some personal quarrel that took place between him and the stranger.

"My meeting with Mrs. Stelle was very unusual. It happened about eight years ago. I was employed by an orchestra leader to sing at private concerts. One of these was held at Mrs. Stelle's house. After I had finished singing Mrs. Stelle handed me a $20 bill and said she had been greatly affected by my singing.

"She told the orchestra leader she wanted him to bring me to her house the next week to sing for her again. The next time, after I had finished my song, she came to me with tears in her eyes and tried to give me money, because she had already been very good to me and I had been well paid for my services. Then she told me to call on her, which I did, and she suggested that I study law.

"I told her that I was a poor young man, with but little money, and she offered to supply me with funds. I refused to let her do this, but suggested that she adopt me as her son. This she said she could not do, as I was too old, but she could marry me. She set a date, but when the time came she refused to keep her promise. I quarreled with her, and we finally compromised when she promised to leave me $25,000 in her will and drew an agreement to that effect.

LOCAL STOCK TRADING LIGHT

NEW YORK, June 15.—Harriman shares and Reading led in a strong and active stock market opening in Wall Street today, Gains ranged from a half to one point throughout the list. Strength in the railroad issues was more pronounced than in the industrials, and there seemed to be plenty of Steel common for sale around 78¾, which is three-quarters of a point above last night's closing.

An advance of one and one-half points in Reading on unusually large transactions attracted attention. Trading in the copper shares was on a light scale, and Amalgamated was inclined to lag behind the general list in its advance. Announcement of a traffic agreement between the Southern Pacific and St. Louis and San Francisco for a period of years long enough to amount to a practical merger of those properties had a favorable influence on sentiment. American shares were richer in London. Sterling shares were steady and quiet on the curb market.

The announcement was received with mirth in political circles, most of the men in the list being regarded with favor by the ex-President.

TUG PEJEPSCOT IS TOTAL LOSS

ST. JOHN, N. B., June 15.—Worked in between two rocks and with heavy seas breaking over her, the tug Pejepscot, which went ashore less than two weeks ago during a heavy storm at Cape Spencer, now is a total wreck. Several holes in her hull it is feared that she will be a total loss.

Several barges in Bay of Fundy and tides have been unsuccessful. The two barges in tow of the Pejepscot, were floated as the cars after going ashore, badly damaged.

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, JUNE 15, 1910

Legislative Session of Small Accomplishment

The Massachusetts Legislature is dying. In a few hours it will be a corpse. At the funeral there will be but few sincere mourners.

The members of the Great and General Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts for 1910 have received their final pay checks, and are anxiously awaiting the hour of prorogation.

Some of them are coming back next year because they have been good to the public service corporations. Some are not coming back because they have not been good to the public service corporations.

If political conditions were as they should be in this State, many of the present members of the House would not be returned, because they have been too good to the public service corporations and too neglectful of the things desired and needed by the common people.

But, so long as the Republican State machine controls the situation through its ability to wage thorough campaigns with the money subscribed by public service corporations, the Legislature will continue to be made up of men who, in the majority, will listen to the dictates of the special privilege grabbing class.

From the point of view of people who believe in progressive legislation, the record of this decaying General Court has been very poor. The mountain labored and brought forth a mouse. It might be more exact to say that it brought forth three or four mice, such as the Bar and Bottle bill, the halting step toward direct nominations of Senators and Representatives, the savings bank regulation and the strike advertising laws.

The mountain toppled over and crushed to death the anti-injunction bill, the anti-lobby bill, the imperative Boston charter amendments, the fifty-four-hour bill, the initiative and referendum, the homestead bill, the milk inspection bill, the bill to punish railway officials for violating the law and for making false returns and the bill for the direct election of United States Senators.

Nothing was done toward solving the North and South Station tunnel problems of Boston or the electrification of railroads. Both were put off until the next General Court.

Every attempt to make the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad behave itself and obey the law was defeated. In other respects the Legislature was very good to the New Haven Railroad. It gave it the Berkshire trolley merger bill, which allows it to gobble up all the street railways in the western part of the State. It enacted a bill permitting the Boston Holding Company, which is controlled by the New Haven Railroad, to issue preferred stock. It also validated the stock of the New Haven road, placing the State's approval upon it.

Half-way measures were adopted in dealing with milk questions. The laws that were passed conferred but very little benefit upon the producers—so small, indeed, that it amounts to practically nothing. As for the consumers of milk, they are as badly off as ever. Of course, the real settlement of the milk question will only come when there is public ownership of the railroads, so that the small producers can ship their product on terms of equality with members of the Milk Trust.

The corporation tendency of the Legislature was well exemplified in the career of the Boston Elevated holding bill. Not only was everything that the Elevated company demanded cheerfully granted in the bill which was reported to the Legislature, but also some grabs were furtively injected into it which the company did not have the nerve to stand for when the fire of publicity got too hot.

Public opinion halted the Legislature and compelled it to leave the whole question to State and municipal boards for proper investigation and an early report next year. Left to its own inclinations, the Legislature would have given the Elevated Company laws that would have placed the city of Boston completely in its power for many years.

Perhaps the attitude of the Legislature was best shown in its handling of two income tax propositions. In order to defeat the Federal income tax resolution, Republican members preached the doctrine of State rights, a doctrine that the Republican party has never stood for, and argued that the State already had an income tax in operation.

On the proposition to extend the power of the State income tax law and make it really mean something, legislators who had howled long and lond in describing the benefits of the State income tax shifted their voices and voted against the bill. In other words, a majority of the Legislature blew hot and blew cold on the income tax.

It is hard to see how Governor Draper has strengthened his position by the legislation he has approved. He earnestly advocated bills for the benefit of the New Haven Railroad, but failed to recommend anything that would relieve the burdensome railroad conditions that affect the farmer and the milk producer.

He vetoed the eight-hour bill, one of the most important issues of last year's campaign. This bill is favored not only by organized labor, but by many other organizations which are seeking to better the conditions of working people.

Speaker Walker of the House has been a strong and dignified character in his position. President Treadway of the Senate has not been a strong character in his position.

It might not be amiss to suggest that the actions of many members of the Legislature during the last days of the session have not been commendable. The horse play that has been indulged in in the House reading rooms and corridors has been undignified and often dangerous. Pelting people with water-soaked towels and other missiles should be stopped. Throwing biscuits and tableware at public banquets is another habit that should be stopped. Such actions reflect no credit on the Legislature as a whole.

The buying of cigars and drinks with public money should be stopped.

It is sincerely to be hoped that the Legislature of 1911 will be more serious-minded and progressive.

SOME THINGS ARE STUPID ENOUGH TO BE AMUSING—AND THEY DO NOT ANNOY YOU. Man sat placidly on the limb of a tree and sawed off the limb between himself and the trunk of the tree. That was very stupid, but it was funny.

Something in New York called "The Three Arts Club" has refused to elect to membership a young actress because she is A JEWESS.

That also is stupid, but really funny. This "Three Arts Club" includes acting among its three arts. What the other two are, we don't know—but one of them must be the art of being extremely silly.

Such a club with a law against Jewesses would be compelled to shut out such a woman as the great Rachel or Bernhardt—if any such should appear. And that certainly would be extremely comical, in a club supposed to encourage dramatic ability.

Race and religious prejudices are vile things always. Sometimes—as in this case—they are sufficiently stupid to be amusing.

My Open-Face Car

By MORTON BIRGE

MOST certain I feel that my automobile
This season I'll not try to use.
(Haven't got one)
I guess I will not take my swell private yacht
On any particular cruise.
(There's a reason)
There isn't a chance of a Summer in France,
I've cut out this "running across."
(Haven't the price)
My country estate can in idleness wait,
It's only a bother and loss.
(It's a pipe, too)

BUT

A nickel will take me for distances far
On the very front seat of an open-face car.
It's Ho! for the trolley. It's common, I know,
But think of the fun at a nickel a throw.
Just give me the breeze blowing free through my hair,
My foot on the dasher and what do I care,
The cool of the twilight, the click of the wheel—
Hurray! for my open-face trolleymobile.

Speculation

By MAX NORDAU

SPECULATION is one of the most intolerable and revolting manifestations of disease in the economic organism. Those profound sages who maintain that everything that exists is superexcellent have also attempted to defend speculation, to justify it, to assert its necessity even to enthusiasm. I will immediately prove to these panegyrists what the principle which they are espousing really is.

The speculator plays in the economic world the part of a parasite. He produces nothing, he does not even perform the questionable service of middleman performed by the merchant. He confines himself to taking away from the real workers, by stealth or violence, the largest part of the proceeds of their labor.

The speculator is a robber who robs the producer of the articles produced by forcing them to accept inadequate compensation for their toil, and the consumers by forcing them to buy from him at an enormous advance. The weapon with which he falls upon the producers and consumers like a highwayman is double-barreled, and is called rise and depression of prices, or cornering the markets. He makes use of this murderous implement in the following manner: When his intention is to plunder the producer, he begins to sell certain goods which he does not possess at a price lower than the current market rates, promising to deliver them to the purchasers a fortnight, a month, or three months, later than the date of sale. The purchaser, of course, buys of the speculator because he asks lower prices.

The producer now has only two courses open to him. If he is rich enough to carry his goods without selling until the day arrives when the speculator is obliged to deliver those he has guaranteed to the purchaser, then the speculator will not be able to get the goods at as low prices as he had hoped, and will be obliged to buy them at the producer's price and lose money on them, thus being robbed instead of robbing. But if the producer cannot do this (and this is by far the most frequent case), then he is forced to sell his goods immediately at such prices as the goods will fetch in the market. He must underbid the speculator, who then becomes his purchaser, for the consumer has already ordered what he wants from the speculator. Thus, when the time comes for him to deliver the goods, he is able to buy them of the producer at a lower price than the one contracted for.

The producer may have become bankrupt by the operation, but the speculator has got his pound of flesh and is happy. If his aim is to plunder the consumer, then he buys up all the available goods offered of a certain kind at the producers' price. He can do this without trouble, as the transaction does not cost him a single penny; he pays for his purchases, not in cash, but in promises. He need not settle his account for weeks or months, as the case may be. Thus, without real possession, frequently without going to the expense of a single dollar, the speculator becomes owner of the goods, and if the consumer wishes to buy any of them he must apply to the speculator and pay the price he demands.

The speculator receives into one hand the money given him by the consumer, and after abstracting a portion as large as possible, which he puts into his own pocket, he hands over the remainder with the other hand to the producer. In this way the speculator, without labor, without benefiting the community, becomes wealthy and influential. Capital extends to him the highest favor, i. e., unlimited credit.

Every workingman, every one without exception, is tributary to the speculator. All our wants are foreseen, all the necessary articles of our consumption are bought up beforehand by speculators, on credit, and sold to us at as high a price as possible, for cash. We cannot eat a bit of bread, nor lie down to rest beneath our roof, nor invest our savings in stocks, without paying to the speculators their assessments in coin, in land and buildings and Stock Exchanges.

The taxes which we pay to the State are oppressive, but by no means so oppressive as those exacted from us by speculation. Certain persons have ventured to defend the Stock and Corn Exchanges as necessary and useful institutions. It is a miracle that they were not suffocated by the enormity of their assertions. What! The Exchanges of the world useful and necessary! Have they ever kept within the limits of their legitimate business? Are they ever simply the meeting place of the bona fide purchaser and the bona fide seller, where honest demand and honest supply can come together and transact their business?

The single comparison of the Commercial Exchange to a poison tree is incomplete, because it only symbolizes one phase of the transactions carried on there, their effect upon the moral nature of the people. The Exchange is a den of robbers in which the modern successors of the robber knights of the Middle Ages make their steals and cut the throats of all who pass by. Like the robber knights, they form a kind of aristocracy, which gets a handsome livelihood out of the people. Like the robber knights, they claim the right to exact contributions from the merchants and artisans. But, more fortunate than the robber knights, they run no risk of being hung high and dry if a stronger person than they comes upon them in their high-handed course of purse-stealing.
